Buy a Mountain Top
Ford's Birthday
Little Strong Men
Shoot First and High

By Arthur Brisbane

THIS IS WRITTEN in the Catskill Mountains, 2500 feet above the sea. The air here is worth ten times as much per cubic foot as the air of sea level plains, and the sun's rays, freed from the impediment of 2500 feet of humid atmosphere, are more powerful.

Take your children to the mountains, every year, if you can.

All will be able to do it some time, able also to travel all over the world, when airplanes shall have reduced the cost of travel 90 per cent, and, with emulation replacing competition, and intelligent men concentrating on the general welfare, instead of their own selfish accumulations.

If that sounds like Utopia, remember that our manner of living, with its 25,000,000 automobiles, millions of bathtubs, electric light, and running water everywhere, would seem better than Utopia to Moore, who gave that name to his imaginary happy country.

If you ever buy real estate, and would like to store up wealth to spoil your children, buy a few mountain or high hill tops, near a great big city, taking care to select them with level or gently slanting tops, for airplane landings. Men will not live forever crowded in cities, like ants in their hills. Our cities and slums are born of transportation difficulties, soon to disappear.

Self-respecting men will live on high ground, like the eagles, flying to their work, in separate specialized cities, landing on the city's roof, going down in "elevators." One city will be for finance, others for various industries, others for merchandising, wholesale and retail. Thousands of prettily colored planes, driven by women, will land on the department store and dressmakers' city. Buy mountain lands for your grandchildren, but do not neglect good city lots for yourself, and your widow.

Henry Ford passed his 68th birthday, last Thursday, and called it "just another day." No celebration, no birthday cake. He spent some time in his garden, more time in his laboratory, read with pleasure telegrams from Edison, Firestone and other old friends, and attended to business.

If you are getting on toward 40 and inclined to be discouraged, think of Henry Ford, who was past 40 when he emerged from obscurity, and made enough automobiles to carry all the people in the United States, at one time.

Young people who think they are not appreciated might remember that Henry Ford as a youth took a job in a machine shop at $2 a week, and because he couldn't live on that took another job to work at night in a jewelry store for $1 a week, and, as he said, "with $3 a week" he had money enough.

It can be done if you have it in you, now as a thousand years ago.

Every American and hundreds of millions of others will wish for Henry Ford at least 100 years of life, partly for his sake but more for the sake of the country.

Mr. Ford has paid out, in high wages, not merely millions, or hundreds of millions, but THOUSANDS OF MILLIONS OF DOLLARS.

And he has had on his payroll, at one time, an army of more than 200,000. Compare that army of peace and production with armies organized for slaughter, in the sort of war that we are now paying for with our gloom and depression.

Washington's public health service, having used 500 men between 20 and 34 years old, as subjects, discovers that in certain ways a little man be better than a big man. To be too big or too little is a disadvantage, except, of course, in thinking, and that kind of exercise is not popular.

The best weight for physical strength is 160 and 170 pounds between 67 and 68 inches, from five feet seven to five feet eight. At greater heights, gravity and the law of gravitation count against you.

In war, especially old-fashioned war, the shorter, the safer. Napoleon would have been killed before he was known, had his head been three inches farther from his feet.

Mayor Walker of New York, outraged by the shooting of five children and the killing of one of them, in a prohibition bootleg war, has ordered officials to shoot to kill, in dealing with gangsters.

"Be the first to draw, when you come upon a man whom you know to be a criminal or a racketeer, and have reason to believe is armed. I want you to pull first and give it to him. And give it to him above the

Friends Say Coolidge Sees Hoover Renominated

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

Col. James F. Coupal, who says that Calvin Coolidge wants to run for President again next year is known to be a mighty fine physician. As a politician he is still a good doctor.

When the Ex-President, the only one of the species, was here in Boston over the Fourth of July, he let his friends understand again, and once more again, that he is happy in private life with no thoughts, plans or hopes to harness himself to public office.

COOLIDGE SILENT

Mr. Coolidge expects that Mr. Hoover will be renominated. The Republican party is not in the habit of turning down its administration, whether it be good, bad, indifferent or just soso. Roosevelt couldn't beat Taft for the nomination.

The ex-President will read Doctor Coupal's discussion of his political prospects with interest. He may read it twice, as he isn't writing his newspaper column these days and has some extra time on his hands. He will make no comment upon it; in his heart he may relish it.

Jack Dempsey will not enter the arena again, but his pride can't be hurt by observations that he could defeat all the present crop

PANGBORN PLANE NOW AT OMSK

Globe Girdlers Aloft Again After Forced Landing at Siberian Mining Town

Moscow, Aug. 1 (INS)—Forced down at Jietiegan a. m. at the mining town 150 miles from Kansk, and again at Omsk, one-time capital of the ill-fated white Russian government, the American round-the-world fliers, Hugh Herndon and Clyde Pangborn were making slow time today on their flight across Siberia.

The Americans at noon brought their red monoplane down at Omsk, 1,250 miles short of their scheduled destination, Irkutsk, on the shores of Lake Baikal, at 2 p. m. (7 a. m. Boston time) according to messages received here from the Siberian city.

Previously they had made an emergency landing at Jietiegan, a mining town about 450 miles from Omsk, where they arrived at 8:30 a. m., Moscow time (2:30 a. m. Boston time).

After a brief stay there they hopped off again for Irkutsk, but traveled only as far as Omsk before they were again forced to come to land.

Los Angeles, Aug. 1 (AP)—H. Girnau, who published attacks upon Clara Bow, screen actress, today was under sentence to serve four years and two months at the McNeil Island federal prison for sending obscene matter through the mails.

Girnau had told the court he was "a fanatic against immoral conditions and that induced me to publish the articles against Miss Bow in order to protect young people's morals." The judge characterized the articles, published in pamphlet form, as "unfit to be fed as garbage to swine."

LAW FORCES FLAYED AS FAILURE

Graft and Incompetence Riddles Forces, Report Says; Corrupt Politicians Hit

Washington, Aug. 1 (AP)—A blanket indictment against the police forces of the country as a "general failure" was handed down today by the Wickersham commission.

In its eighth report to President Hoover, the commission charged that with few exceptions units in the system were shot through with graft and incompetence and too often were under the direct control of dishonest politicians.

The report asserted without qualification that major criminals in almost every community are "well known to the police, but, by reason of the sinister influence exerted by corrupt politicians are allowed to continue their criminal careers."

SIX MAJOR CHARGES

The report concluded, in short, that defects in present police administration "too generally leave the citizen helpless in the hands of the criminal class."

Six major charges were brought. They follow in brief:

"1—The chief evil lies in the insecure, short term of service of the police chiefs and in their being subject while in office to the control of politicians in the discharge of his duties.

"2—The second outstanding evil of such poor police administration is the lack of competent, efficient, and honest patrolmen and subordinate officers.

"3—The third great defect is the lack of efficient communication systems whereby intelligence of the commission of crime and descriptions of the criminals may be quickly spread over a wide territory.

"4—The well known and oft repeated alliance between criminals and corrupt politicians which controls, in part, at least, where it does not wholly do so, the police forces of our large cities, might well be taken as a

ITALIAN KING ESCAPES BOMB

Genoa, Italy, Aug. 1 (AP)—A bomb exploded in a street in the heart of the business section today a few hours before King Victor Emmanuel and Queen Elena arrived for the launching of the ocean liner Rex.

The bomb explosion shattered windows and panic ensued.

It was believed the bombing had some connection with the royal visit.

The king and queen, however, arrived in Genoa only a short time before the launching, coming by train from Sant' Ana a Del, their summer residence.

The bomb was planted in front of the Italian Transatlantic Society building, to which most of the damage was done.

This was the fourth bomb explosion in Genoa in recent weeks. The city was subjected to a kind of martial law immediately after today's explosion.

The neighborhood was searched and hundreds were arrested. Apparently no one was injured by the blast.

LINDY AND WIFE HOP TO WILDS

Their immediate destination was the isolated port of Moose Factory, on the southern tip of James Bay, 460 miles from here.

This jump of 461 miles will take them from Canada's capital to a trading post of the Hudson Bay Co., their first stopping place until they reach Aklavik in the Yukon territory which borders Alaska.

Lindbergh said if flying conditions were difficult over the northerly route which he has mapped, they would fly 100 or 200 miles to the south of it.

The Government radio station established communication with the plane at 11 o'clock, E S T. Mrs. Lindbergh reported they were making good progress and were on a direct course to Moose Factory.

Although Mrs. Lindbergh did not give the plane's position it must by that time have been safely over the Gatineau Hills and flying above the flat country, dotted with lakes, which stretches all the way to Moose Factory.

For the first time since they started their vacation flight the Lindberghs wore life preservers. They were pneumatic vests which could be quickly inflated.

LAWYER TO WED IN HAWAII

Shady palms on the bright sands of Honolulu were the locale of a 12-year romance which climaxed today in the engagement of Miss Winifred Louise Warren, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis J. Warren of Manoa Valley, Honolulu, to Atty. Robert R. Thurber of Cambridge.

Thurber, who is the son of Capt. Clinton D. Thurber, U. S. N., and Mrs. Thurber of Orange, N. J., formerly lived in Honolulu. It was there he met his future bride a dozen years ago.

Thurber came to America to attend Princeton University and later Miss Thurber came to attend Wellesley College, and the romance blossomed. Thurber is a member of a Boston law firm.

Miss Warren recently returned to her home in Hawaii after a year of travel in Europe. Her father is one of Honolulu's foremost lawyers and a member of the firm of Smith, Warren, Stanley and Vitousek, in that city.

The prospective groom is a member of the Harvard Club of Boston and the Longwood Cricket Club.

The wedding will take place in Honolulu early in October. After their return from Hawaii, the bridal couple probably will make their home in Brookline.

MARK 'KING' QUIZZED IN JEWEL ROBBERY

George "Pinky" Perkins, German Broker, Faces Grilling by Newton Police

George "Pinky" Perkins, once known as the "German mark king," will be questioned in connection with the $100,000 jewel robbery in Newton Wednesday, Newton police announced today.

Perkins was asked to go to Newton police headquarters for quizzing by Capt. Richard J. Goode, Sergt. Patrick King, Special Officers Frank Feeley and George Muller and A. A. Formose, a New York private detective engaged by the company that insured the gems.

Perkins lives in Laudholm rd., Newton, and has a brokerage office in Boston.

Joseph H. Leff, partner in a New York jewelry concern, who was relieved of the gems on Beacon st. by five armed men, had just been to Perkins' home to show his wares, in company with William Pennfield of Brookline.

Leff returned to Boston yesterday and went over his movements in minute details with the Newton officers and the detectives, who decided that the next step in the probe should be to question Perkins.

Leff had gone to Perkins' home after first going to his downtown office where he had an appointment. He was surprised to find the broker absent but was sent to the Newton house of an office attache.

Perkins became known to the public as "Pinky" several years ago when he was sued for $100,000 for breach of promise by Dixie Esmonde, a Nantasket dancer. He is married to the former Mrs. James H. Trumbull, Jr.

GIRLS LURED TO CAMBRIDGE REVELS 'TO BE STARS'

PLEDGE OF FILM FAME USED BY GAY SHIEKS

Police Say Harvard Sq. Is Used as Curbstone Headquarters for Masher Gang

Cambridge police revealed today that Harvard sq. is being used as "curbstone headquarters" by a group of youths whose "racket" is to lure girls with offers of movie careers into apartments, the real aim being to have attractive companions for petting and liquor parties.

Several girls have complained of being thus victimized, but in every case have refused to give their names, according to the police. The youths involved are not Harvard students.

Glib talkers, these youths park at the curbs in flashy cars early in the evening and rarely fail to attract two or three pretty girls into their net with their high-sounding "palaver" about movie stardom, money, fame and contracts.

Fake blank contracts are produced if necessary, and this bait usually proves enough to convince the most suspicious "prospect."

After being taken to apartments in the Harvard sq. area, drinks are produced first to lend color to the fanciful talk.

According to the police, a frequent ending of the whole affair is for the girls to be put out with little formality when the party has become boresome to their hosts. As all complaints have been anonymous the authorities have been unable to prosecute the youths.

waist." That is the order given to his men by Mayor Walker's police chief, Commissioner Mulrooney, a policeman of many years' experience, who knows criminals, and is feared by them.

Unfortunately, in these days of profitable, organized crime, a superior, giving orders to officials under him cannot be sure of results. The men sent out, as shown in much of prohibition enforcement, may be pursuing a criminal, and he MAY be protecting a business associate.

American farmers are resourceful. In the West, grasshoppers have been destroying crops on a scale unbelievable, as though farmers had not trouble enough already.

In Colorado, state of C. F. Bonfils, and his Denver Post, farmers refused to be discouraged. They fastened troughs half filled with water in front of automobiles, and drove through their devastated grain fields, scooping up grasshoppers, pouring them into bags, drying and storing them for chicken feed. One farmer gathered 30 bushels of grasshoppers to the acre, and grasshoppers contain much protein, and many "units" of vitamins.

Imagine the chicken's admiration for those farmers and their agility, supposing that the grasshoppers were caught, one at a time.

COURT CALLS STRIKE HEADS

Deputy U. S. Marshal James Cunningham was assigned today to submit service of a federal court order restraining officers and members of striking locals from further impeding work on the new postoffice building.

He will attempt to serve the officers of the locals at their respective headquarters or at their homes, and upon the service depends the outcome of the strike.

Judge James A. Lowell issued the order by which it is hoped to bring the jurisdictional strike to a close, pending litigation on the merits of the dispute.

Representatives of the disputants are ordered to appear in federal court next Thursday to show cause why a permanent injunction restraining them from interference should not be issued.

Should Cunningham fail to make service the defendants cannot be bound by the terms of the order, it was learned.

Men on whom Deputy Cunningham is scheduled to make service are: James H. Fitzpatrick, treasurer; William F. Dwyer, president and secretary; James E. McDonald, business agent of Local No. 24, Hoisting and Portable Engineers of the International Union of Steam and Portable Engineers, and Arthur Andenberg, president; James F. WHITE HOUSE AIDS SHIFTED Washington, Aug. 1—Walter Ferguson, veteran White House Secret Service operative and personal friend of President Wilson, Harding and Coolidge, has been transferred to Providence, R. I.

Whether this action was in connection with the alleged "leak" of White House information within the last month could not be learned. But the order for his transfer was issued at the same time President Hoover started an investigation. At the same time John Fitzgerald, another veteran operative, was transferred to New York.

Ferguson was popular with the previous administrations and regarded as a highly efficient operative. President Harding wanted him to be chief of police of Washington, but he declined.

U. S. WILL LEND $125,000,000 TO BRITAIN

Joins France in $250,000,000 Credit to Bank of England; Wall St. Surprised

Paris, Aug. 1—In an official communique today the Bank of France announced it and the Federal Reserve Bank of New York had "opened a credit of $250,000,000 in favor of the Bank of England."

The statement said:

"The two institutions will participate in the credit to the extent of $125,000,000 each."

The communique revealing the agreement was issued following a lengthy meeting between Sir Robert Kindersley, representing the Bank of England, and M. Clement Moret, governor of the Bank of France.

The loan was made necessary by the heavy withdrawals of gold from the Bank of England during the last few days. Two recent increases in the bank's rediscount rate only partially succeeded in stemming the outflow.

Wall St. Surprised by Big U. S. Loan to Britain

New York, Aug. 1 (AP)—News of the substantial banking credit to the Bank of England came as a surprise to Wall Street. It had been publicly known for several days that negotiations with the Bank of France had been in progress, but it was recently believed here that the British institution had decided to forego a large credit abroad.

Since the run on the Bank of England's gold reserve started, as a repercussion on the German difficulties, it has been stated informally in highest banking circles here that the Bank of England would have no difficulty in getting almost any credit that it might desire in Wall Street, but the opinion was expressed that it might be more effective in checking the flow of British gold to Continental Europe if the bank obtained a credit in Paris.

Boston Bank to Join in British Credit

According to Roy A. Young, governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, the bank here is to participate in the proposed purchase from the Bank of England of $125,000,000 in prime commercial bills as a measure to aid both American and British trade.

The exact quota of the Boston branch is not determined, but it is understood that it will be in ratio to the capital and surplus on hand of the entire Federal Reserve System of 12 reserve banks is included in the purchase.

She was interviewed in a private ward of Windsor Hospital, which the prince engaged for her. It was fragrant with roses and carnations sent by him.

"I saw the prince carrying my sister into the clubhouse of the golf club where the collision occurred," she said.

"The next thing I remember was the prince bathing my forehead, and so competently, too. He stayed at the clubhouse bathing our wounds, and talking to us for an hour until we were brought to the hospital. He seemed the only person really calm."

Miss Dahpne Rugga, the sister, was the more painfully hurt. The prince was uninjured.

FEDERAL DOLE BILL PUSHED IN CONGRESS

$100,000,000 Aid for Idle to Be Sought Unless Relief Appears

Washington, Aug. 1—America must accept the federal dole this winter unless some solution of the unemployment situation can be found, all authorities in Washington agreed today.

As the nation approaches the third winter of widespread unemployment, it already is reported that the Progressive group in the Senate is preparing to force the dole issue. Senator LaFollette of Wisconsin, chairman of the unemployment group of the Progressive conference, is reported preparing a federal dole bill for introduction when the Congress meets in December.

$100,000,000 SOUGHT.

This measure would provide $100,000,000 for direct aid to the unemployed.

President Hoover will make a desperate effort to thwart any legislation along these lines. But the Progressives hold the whip hand in Congress and it is said they are prepared to drive a bargain with the administration, providing the Progressives will support Republican organization of both branches in exchange for the dole bill.

A substantial majority of the Democrats in Congress now are convinced of the difficulties of avoiding a federal dole system if business and employment fail to pick up, and they are expected to support the program.

OPINIONS DIFFER.

There still exists a wide difference of opinions as to the efficacy of the dole and the method to be applied, but a general feeling prevails, however, that any measure for that purpose should not be confined to municipalities.

Senator Caraway of Arkansas points out that more than 1,000,000 men with dependent families live outside of the cities and must be included in any federal aid program.

36 SEIZED IN GAMING RAID

With a raid on a club in Tremont st., South End, today in which a large squad of police went over a fire escape and through a window to make their arrests and seizures, Capt. John E. Anderson of East Dedham st. division began a drive on gambling in the district.

The raid resulted from numerous complaints from wives of men who have lost money in the place, according to Capt. Anderson.

36 MEN SEIZED

Thirty-six men were arrested and money and paraphernalia seized. The police made the raid the second floor of a building near Dover st., is occupied, according to the police, by the Italian Club, an organization holding a state charter.

Dice were clicking and several card games were going on, police alleged, when a side window suddenly was pushed open and officers streamed in from the fire escape.

There is only one exit and virtually everybody in the room dashed for it. The jam made the police roundup easier, although in the midst of the melee somebody switched the lights off.

The eight raiders were led by Sergts. William E. Metz and William McDonnell. Besides marching out the arrested men, they confiscated 10 sets of cards, six pairs of dice, three long tables and some money.

OTHER RAIDS LOOM

Those arrested were transported to Station 5 in two automobiles, which made several trips to accommodate them all. Most of them were bailed out at $25 each pending arraignment in municipal court for being present where gambling was in progress.

Capt. Anderson said the complaints, with information gathered by men specially assigned to the task, showed that gambling had cropped out recently in several places in the district, and all would be cleaned out.

CONSUMERS TO SAVE $110,000 ANNUALLY

Mrs. Lucy A. Pearlmutter Will Press Fight for Further Cuts

A saving of $110,000 annually will accrue to the Revere consumers of the Suburban Gas & Electric Light Company as a result of a decision handed down today by the State public utilities commission.

The commission ordered a reduction of one-half cent per kilowat hour in each of the "steps" or blocks of the residential rates and the first block of the commercial rate.

"If the experience of the future should demonstrate that a larger reduction can properly be made the department will make such an order," says the commission in its finding.

The commission turned down the request of the consumers for removal of the $3 connection charge and the 50-cent service charge, against which a stiff fight was made during the hearings.

COURT FIGHT LOOMS

It also denied the request for findings of fact and rulings of law, which means that Mrs. Lucy A. Pearlmutter, chief counsel for the consumers of Revere and Winthrop, will take the case to the Supreme Court for further action.

"I consider the decision a partial victory for the consumers of electricity in Revere and Winthrop," said Mrs. Pearlmutter today. "It is a victory in that the consumers will save $110,000 annually, but desiring further justice I am taking this case to the Supreme Court.

CITES BIG DIVIDENDS

"In addition I will fight for a further reduction in rates, as I cannot understand the attitude of the commission in making such a small reduction in view of the large earnings of the company and the big dividends paid. The company paid 16 per cent in 1930 and 12 per cent during the five preceding years. All this in the time of depression and when other companies are cutting their dividends.

"I intend to conduct this fight to a finish in behalf of the residents of Revere."

Mrs. Pearlmutter was the first woman to conduct a fight against a public utility in Massachusetts. In 1922 and 1923 she successfully forced the company to remove its 35-cent meter charge.

SMOKES, RUM TABOOED BY PIERCE GIRL

Recipient of Davis Wealth Loves Outdoors; Romance of Adoption Told

Editha Pierce, 18, whose foster mother has bequeathed her $4,000,000, shuns cigarettes, liquor and other pastimes of flaming youth. Although taken from an orphanage to be reared amid luxury, she kept her feet on the ground, her head level, and turned out a splendid type of healthy, outdoor girl.

Of slightly serious bent, in spite of her life of ease, she once planned to be a missionary.

These and other facts about the girl who has inherited most of the wealth of Mrs. Adelaide Pierce Davis of Lynnfield, whose adopted daughter she was, were revealed today by Atty. Charles C. Buckman of Boston, one of the executors.

"She is a fine, quiet girl with no flair for modern vices," said Buckman. "She is refined and conservative and not at all forward. She might sit in a room with grownups for an hour without saying a word.

FOND OF OUTDOORS

"Whether she will go to college or not, I don't know. The other executor and myself will sort of father her for a while and there aren't any plans for her immediate future."

After her adoption at the age of 6, she always was taken by her foster mother to the South in winter and on other trips, and is accustomed to the life of luxury which will be hers.

It was while she was still small, on a trip to Florida, that her childish play on the train led to the meeting of the then Mrs. Pierce and Howard Clark Davis, who became her second husband.

Mrs. Davis divorced her husband last year. A few weeks ago she lost her life in a boating tragedy on Lake Suntaug at Lynnfield.

The girl who inherits the bulk of her wealth is blonde, short and slender, a hockey player at Kendall Hall, the exclusive Pride's Crossing girls' school, and vice-president of her class there.

Editha's father, Thomas T. Scanlon, died only last January at the age of 42. His wife, mother of Editha, was Jessica Plain girl. A grandfather, Thomas Scanlon, lives at 41 Cohannet st., Taunton.

ANDIUS SPOTLIGHT

The heiress was in seclusion today, losing from the glare of publicity which was directed at her when the contents of her foster mother's will became known.

It was learned that she was adopted by Mrs. Davis then Mrs. Pierce, after the latter had first intended to adopt her sister, Viola, now 21.

The two girls and their brother, Ted, now 18, were reared in a religious orphanage after the death of their mother and two years later, Mrs. Pierce called and asked to be allowed to take some children to her estate for a few days.

The young children were sent to her. When later she asked to be allowed to adopt one of the girls, the sister objected, not wishing them to be separated, but at last consented.

Mrs. Ethel Smith, who was housekeeper for Mrs. Davis for years, adopted the other two by arrangement with the Boy Scout movement, it is understood. They went to live with Miss Smith at Humarock Beach on the South Shore and were provided for by Mrs. Davis until her death.

A few years ago Editha, whose name was originally Edith May, learned when her father was and communicated with him several times. She did not learn of his death, however, until after the death of Mrs. Davis last month.

POOR GIRL MADE RICH

Miss Editha Pierce Davis inherits the extensive estate of her foster mother, Mrs. Adelaide Pierce Davis, and a good share of her millions. Edith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas T. CAPONE FACES RE-INDICTMENT

Chicago, Aug. 1 (INS)—Asst. U. S. Atty. Victor E. La Rue today said he would go before the federal grand jury on Tuesday to present evidence with a view of indicting Al Capone under the Jones "five-and-ten" law in accordance with the implied instructions issued by Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson.

Despite this new move in the case Capone's present freedom under $50,000 bail bids fair to last several months as a complicated and long legal battle loomed in the background.

There were indications that Judge Wilkerson would not sentence Capone in the end at all, as Capone's lawyers indicated they would seek a change of venue because "Scarface Al" thinks the judge is prejudiced.

Washington Silent on Capone Shift

Washington, Aug 1—The Department of Justice maintained a frigid silence today over the unexpected developments in the prosecution of "Scarface" Al Capone at Chicago.

Taking the position that the case was still before the court, Attorney-General Mitchell and other officials refused to discuss what occurred on the ground that to do so would be unethical.

Nevertheless, it was understood Mitchell had approved the agreement whereby Capone originally pleaded guilty in return for the promise of a light sentence. Without Mitchell's approval, the U. S. attorney's office at Chicago would not have made such an arrangement.

'RICHES DOOMED BY REDS': SHAW

Berlin, Aug. 1 (AP)—George Bernard Shaw arrived today, bringing the message from Russia that "Capitalism is doomed."

As he descended from his sleeper, Shaw remarked that it was "torture to get back."

It won't be long, he said, before Russia will get on her own feet.

He thought, however, that in its present state Communism was not suited to the rest of the world.

Warsaw, Poland, Aug. 1 (AP)—Passing through Warsaw on their way home to England from Moscow, George Bernard Shaw and Lady Astor stopped long enough to say complimentary things about Russia.

Shaw said there was no shortage of food in the Soviet and he described the workers as happy and toiling for the common good.

'BROKE' BERLIN BANK SOLVENT

The Darmstaedter und National Bank, which everybody expected would be liquidated, is solvent through the joint action of a group of industrialists.

This outstanding manifestation of Germany's readies to pull herself out of her mess was taken today as indication that other reservours of strength will open up as situations call for remedy.

Further evidence of Germany's determination to mend her own ills was seen in the action of the Reichsbank, which raised the discount rate from 10 to 15 per cent.

POLICE SHOOT IN GANG WAR

New York, Aug. 1 (AP)—Sixteen police cars, each carrying four detectives armed with automatic shotguns, cruised the city today to meet with force the gangsters responsible for the death of one man and the wounding of two persons in two or more outbreaks.

The automobile squads swept out of a dozen police stations and by midnight already had sent five roaming hoodlums, all suffering from bullet wounds.

The five men were shot while attempting holdups last night. Two were wounded by a patrolman; the three by one of the shotgun squads.

The fatal shooting yesterday was in Brooklyn. The other was in E. 103d st., only a short distance from the Harlem neighborhood, where one child was killed and four were shot Tuesday.

The Brooklyn killing of Guido Ferarri, a mild-mannered youth who had no underworld connections, was blamed by police on racketeers. He evidently was mistaken for a man well known in the clothing labor circles, which has been terrorized by gangsters.

An additional reward of $5000 was made yesterday, bringing the total to $30,000 in the hunt for the gunmen who shot Michael Vernalli, five.

Reports indicate fair and partly warmer weather for tomorrow. Moderate north to east winds will prevail.

Aboard Submarine Nautilus, July 31—With favorable weather and a glassy sea, the Nautilus, even with only one engine going, showed surprising speed today.

There the Nautilus will be made ship-shape from stem to stern and Capt. Sloan Danenhower and his officers will select the supplies needed for our trip under the ice to the North Pole.

We expect to get away from Bergen, for Spitzenbergen and the Arctic by Tuesday morning at the latest.

Most of the supplies have been waiting in Bergen for two months.

We were surprised at 6 a. m. today while passing through fog to receive a caller. A fishing smack suddenly loomed up out of the mist and the captain offered us some fish. We accepted his offer, appreciating his act as well as his fish.

At 10 a. m. we sighted land and have been keeping it in sight ever since. At 8 p. m. a pilot sent by Commandante Moe of the Royal Norwegian Naval Base at Bergen, came aboard to pilot us into the bay yard.

Boardman revealed that their present arrangements will take them to Calcutta, India, and Tokio by easy stages. He said they would not attempt to set a round-the-world flight record in a race with Hugh Herndon, Jr., and Clyde Pangborn, now flying over Russia.

Boardman and Polando, who were feted yesterday after a 16-hour sleep, today will be formally presented with silver plaques commemorative of their achievement in spanning an ocean and a continent. They will also be given several valuable rugs by the municipal council of Istanbul.

FACED HARD TIMES.

He and Coolidge went through hard times together. He was at the bedside of Calvin Coolidge, Jr., and he took care of the President's father during that long, tortuous illness in Plymouth Notch, Vt.

When the funeral of the boy was over and the saddened President had returned to the White House, he threw his arms around Coupal's shoulders and wept like a child. In the privacy of the White House the two intelligences most affected by the death of the promising boy consoled each other in their mutual bereavement.

Coupal Sees Coolidge Running for Office Again

St. Paul, Minn., July 31 (AP)—The St. Paul Dispatch in a copyrighted story today quotes J. F. Coupal, former White House physician, as saying Calvin Coolidge did not intend to remove himself unconditionally from Presidential field when he issued his "I do not choose to run" statement.

Instead, Coupal said, he merely wished, in compliances with his sense of justice, to cast aside any advantage his position might give him and permit the people to choose another man if they preferred. He added:

"President Coolidge would have loved to be the third term President of the United States. He was not disgusted with political office, as some have intimated.

"He has honestly endeavored to be just and fair and wanted the decision to come from the people.

"President Coolidge was hurt and disappointed, but having been misunderstood, he felt that possibly there was a stronger man and refused to correct the misinterpretation."

Col. Coupal expresses the opinion that Mr. Coolidge could be induced to run for President in 1932.

NATION'S POLICE FLAYED BY BOARD

primary cause of inefficiency, since it rules the head and lays a paralyzing hand upon determined action against major criminals."

"3—There are too many duties laid upon each officer and patrolman.

"A sixth charge was one of failure to make proper provision for the policing of millions of immigrants."

Only 10 of the 11 commissioners signed the report. The signature of Monte Lemann, New Orleans attorney, was missing. No explanation was given, nor was any individual report by him included.

Of the cities specifically mentioned in both reports Milwaukee was the only one to receive unqualified praise. The commission cited it as "a city free from crime or where the criminal is speedily arrested, convicted and promptly tried and sent on his way to serve his time." It added that "no other city has such a record."

Condemning the methods under which police chiefs are selected and controlled the commission said Indianapolis a few years ago had furnished a "classic instance."

GOOD TAILOR, GOOD CHIEF

It said the mayor appointed his police as police chief "because he had been his tailor for 20 years and he knew he was a good tailor and as necessarily would make a good chief of police."

Speaking of factors that contributed to make police departments "the plaything of crooked politicians," the swift changing of officials in New York and Chicago was called "deplorable."

It was said that Los Angeles once was controlled by a few gamblers. San Francisco was said to have been so completely controlled by gamblers at one time that three of them should dice to determine who would name the first police chief, who the second and who the third.

When gamblers were driven out of Detroit recently, it was said, they retaliated by ousting the commissioner from office despite his being "recognized by police chiefs as one of the ablest police executives in America."

POLITICAL BOSSES HIT

The commission asserted that often the chief of police, being subject to dismissal when displeasing the mayor or the politicians, many times was forced "to follow their often brutal orders to go easy on this or that criminal or criminal gang who are in alliance with his patrons."

Attacking the types of men who make up most police forces, Monroe asserted that 60 per cent of the present personnel have never entered high school.

The great majority, he said, are "not gifted either by temperament, training or education for their position," and according to some standards, 70 per cent "are not mentally endowed to perform the duties assigned them."

The report praised Detroit, saying out of 22,503 broadcasts in 1929, the police made 1325 arrests at an average of one minute 42 seconds, frequently getting the guilty person in the very act of committing the crime.

It reported Commissioner Rutledge as saying that murderers had been caught at the scene of their crime, burglars had been apprehended while still piling up their loot, bank stick-up men placed in bandcuffs within 60 seconds after leaving the bank, and a man saved from drowning 70 seconds after the alarm was broadcast.

Chicago was criticized because at least 15 minutes were reported necessary to sound an alarm in its 40 stations by telephone.

This same report praised the types of police headquarters found in Milwaukee, San Francisco, Cleveland, St. Louis and Detroit.

"On the other hand," it added, "we have conditions in our large cities which are the very antithesis of proper policing. Kansas City, Los Angeles, Minneapolis, and Denver are representative of the extent to which rapidly changing conditions have created problem with which the police departments have not been given adequate facilities to cope.

"The surveys made of Los Angeles, Minneapolis, Kansas City, Detroit, Cleveland and Cincinnati all disclosed facts that demanded immediate change."

MORE POLICEWOMEN URGED.

The report by Garrett urged the extended use of policewomen in crime prevention work. It quoted a 1928 report from Detroit that feminine officers were instrumental in returning to their homes 235 girls from other cities, locating 90 per cent of all Detroit girls reported missing and removing 162 girls from hotels and rooming houses.

The report dealing with the selection of police personnel said Kansas City had presented an example of wholesale dismissals at the start of each new police regime. In 1926, it reported, approximately 33 per cent of the force had had less than three years' service.

It added that five of seven lieutenants taking an examination in Kansas City had not gone beyond the grades school, while among sergeants 21 of 30 had never entered high school, with 23 of 33 detectives in the same category. Of the 501 persons taking the test in question, it said, 70 per cent had no training above the grades.

BOSTON MENTIONED

That section of the report dealing with the need of national police communication systems cited Connecticut as having demonstrated the practicability of a state hook-up of a teletype system unusually confined to use in cities.

Boston was mentioned only briefly as of the four cities "still under state authority." The report by Garrett said that the others were Baltimore, Kansas City and St. Louis.

The commission itself gave no conclusions, but the study by the three experts made the following suggestions:

"The corrupting influences of politics should be removed from the police organization.

"The head of the department should be selected at large for competence, a leader, preferably a man of police experience, and removable from office only after preferment of charges and a public hearing.

LOW SALARIES HIT

"Patrolmen should be able to rate a 'B' on the alpha test (a standard intelligence test), be able-bodied and of good character, weigh 150 pounds, measure 5 feet 9 inches tall and be between 21 and 31 years of age.

"Salaries should permit decent living standards, housing should be adequate, eight hours work, one day off weekly, annual vacation, fair sick leave with pay and just accident, pension and death benefits when in performance of duty.

"The communication system should provide for call boxes, telephones, recall system, and teletype and radio."

Police Report Doesn't Hit Boston, Says Crowley

Supt. Michael H. Crowley today read the six major findings of the Wickersham committee, assailing the police for a general failure to cope with crime, and said six times, one for each item:

"That doesn't apply to Boston."

He refused any further comment on the report.

STATE LEADS IN AIRPORTS

Results of an aviation survey just completed by the Aviation Bureau of the Boston Chamber of Commerce disclose that there are 105 airplane landing fields in New England divided as follows: Maine, 13; New Hampshire, 11; Vermont, 10; Massachusetts, 42; Rhode Island, 11 and Connecticut, 18.

Information gathered in this survey has been published in a folder entitled "Airports and Landing Fields in New England." It is designed to help the pilot or air traveler interested in planning a journey.

In addition to the name of each field information is provided on the distance and direction from the center of the city; its description and direction of runways, together with other essential information.

It is expected the directory will be of value in encouraging the development of aviation in New England.

New Fire Station Contract Awarded

A contract for the construction of the new fire station at East Fourth and K sts., South Boston, was awarded to J. J. Fingerlish at a cost of $124,650, by Mayor Curley today.

The mayor revealed that the cost of construction work has dropped 30 per cent because of the decrease in the price of materials and as a result enough money will be saved from the appropriation for the South Boston structure to erect a new ladder house in Longwood and Brookline aves.

City Ships Face Repairs

Two vessels of the municipal fleet go into drydock at Greene's shipyard in Chelsea next week. Contracts for repairs to fireboat 47, at a cost of $2570, and $3071 repairs for the ferryboat John H. Sullivan, were let today by Mayor Curley.

At 2:30 the marchers started from Tremont and Carmel sts.

CARS COLLIDE; MAN INJURED

One man was seriously injured when a large truck and a light sedan, both traveling at a fast rate, police say, collided at Western ave. and Memorial drive, Cambridge, early today.

Joseph Camarra, 46, of Decatur st., Arlington, a passenger in the sedan, was taken to Cambridge hospital suffering from a fracture of the left thigh, lacerations of the head and face and contusions.

The truck driver, Joseph Downes, of Hawthorn st., Hartford, Ct., and the operator of the sedan, Menotti Giorgio, the injured man's son-in-law, were unhurt.

Three wheels of the sedan were sheared off by the impact. The truck also was badly damaged.

Hundreds Delayed as Signal Fails

Hundreds of commuters were delayed today when three Boston & Maine trains were held up for ten minutes as a signal block at Winter Hill, Somerville, failed to operate. A Wilmington local and two Nashua, N. H., locals were forced to stop until the signal was repaired.

TRUCK PLAYS HAVOC WITH SEDAN IN COLLISION

When a large truck and a light sedan, both traveling at a rapid rate, crashed at the intersection of Western ave. and Memorial Drive, Cambridge, early today, Joseph Camarra, 46, of 67 Decatur st., Arlington, a passenger in the sedan, was seriously injured. Menotti Giorgio, operator of the sedan, is viewing the wreckage of his car, from which three wheels were sheared off by the impact. The truck also was badly damaged. (Staff photo.)

BAND CONCERT FOR CITY HOME

Metropolitan Firemen's Post American Legion band will present an open air concert on the grounds of the Cambridge Home for Aged and Infirm Sunday.

The band, composed of 70 musicians, representing 10 cities and towns in the state, will be escorted to the grounds by members of the Cambridge fire and police departments.

The band was organized a year ago and is under the leadership of Fireman James E. Sullivan of Everett.

An Imported Myth

The idea that foreign [illegible] is [illegible] in style and value is a myth that has been imported from foreign lands to benefit foreign industries. American workers lead the world in skill, intelligence, creative ability and reliable workmanship. Nowhere can finer fabrics be produced than in American textile mills by conscientious Americans.

MONEY—AND MATRI—MONEY IN THESE MODERN DAYS

By HELEN ROWLAND

IF IT TOOK as much time and money to get married as it does to get out of it, matrimony would probably be as safe, lasting and fashionable as divorce.

* * *

Never say that we moderns have lost all our faith. Women still believe all the glowing promises of the beauty-cream advertisements, and men still continue to buy bottles of hair-restorer and reducing belts.

* * *

HELEN ROWLAND.

A man seldom stops to ask a woman if her love will last forever; because he is usually perfectly satisfied if it will last until next week.

* * *

A husband, these days, is like a restaurant opera; almost any woman who takes a fancy to him seems to regard him as just something to help herself to.

* * *

A feminine bridge party doesn't really get going until somebody breaks the news of the latest scandal

* * *

The prospective bridegroom should have "showers" and a hopechest. He will probably need a cookbook, a lot of hole-proof socks and a box of bachelors' buttons.

* * *

A popular bachelor complains that he can't wear beach pajamas because they are too feminine. He wants to know why it is that, every time a man discovers something comfortable or useful for himself, the women grab it and take it away from him.

* * *

It is not that women are really naggy! but it takes so much argument for a woman to convince a man that he is not going to, do what he wanted to do nor going to spend his vacation the way he intended to spend it.

* * *

Nothing disturbs a man worse than to find that he has stirred up a woman's jealousy—except to find out that he can't.

* * *

A man's love may be blind, but it is seldom deaf, when an attractive widow's money "talks."

Baby's Loss of Weight May Be Dangerous

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

ONE OF the most unpleasant ailments encountered in the care of infants and children is "marasmus." This condition is also spoken of as "infantile atrophy," or "simple wasting." It is shown by the infant's gradual but progressive loss of weight.

Dr. Copeland

This condition is commonly found in large institutions caring for infants. Sometimes it is associated with tuberculosis and other constitutional diseases. Frequently it can only be traced to marked lack of nutrition and improper feeding.

Many cases are attributed to hereditary weakness. In spite of supervised and well-regulated feeding, the child thrives poorly and fails to gain in weight.

The condition is a severe one and may prove fatal. The longer it continues the more serious the outlook. When recognized quickly and promptly the child may be saved.

Breast feeding should always be encouraged where possible. Marasmus is most common in bottle-fed infants. If young mothers were encouraged to nurse their infants, I believe there would be fewer cases of marasmus.

GRAND HOTEL :-: By VICKI BAUM

Baron Tells Dancer of His Past

GRUSINSKAYA was thinking. The train for Prague leaves at 11:20. If only there's no hitch. I let go of everything today and tomorrow there will be a muddle. Pimenov is too weak and the girls twist him round their fingers. But whoever misses the train tomorrow shall get the sack, that's positive. If Pimenov hasn't troubled about the scenery tonight, it won't be packed by tomorrow. The scene shifters ought to be working overtime tonight.

If I don't see to everything myself, nothing gets done. Then there's Meyerheim's accounts. Good God, however did I come to run such a business? Witte, he'll leave his own head behind in the hotel if no one looks after him.

They all rely on me, and this evening I wasn't there. There will be a regular debacle. Lucille has only been waiting for the chance to make a row. Their names are never in large enough type on the posters. They're never given a proper chance. But they never do a thing for themselves.

If I don't hold the whip over them, they go to pieces. They have made me short-tempered and conceited and tired. Heavens, how tired I was last night. How little we needed to train them where they would be without Grusinskaya. But now I am not a bit tired.

I could dance the whole program, or a new program, or a new dance. I must talk to Pimenov about it. A dance of dread, oh, I could dance that for you now. At first on one spot only and only a tremor, and then three circles on the toes, or no, not on the toes—perhaps, perhaps something quite different.

But I live, I am still alive, she thought in a transport. I shall dance new dances and I shall have success. A woman who is loved always has success. To think that a foolish boy who comes climbing in over the balcony can give one such strength. A spoilt child who knows nothing of love, but the silly talk of girls.

"I don't even know your name, my friend, she said, very softly.

"I am called Felix. In full, Felix Amadeï Benvenuto Freiherr von Gaigern."

Grusinskaya reflected a moment then she smiled softly.

"Your mother must have thought a lot of you when you came into the world to give you such beautiful names," she said.

"The adjutant: "The beloved of God. The welcome one. Did you cry when you were christened?"

"I don't remember."

"Do you know, I have a child, too. A daughter. How old are you, Excellency?"

"Today I am seventeen, for this is my first love affair. In other respects, thirty. He made himself out a little older than he was from a touching consideration for the woman who was afraid of her age). Nevertheless it hurt her. He might be the father of my eight-year-old grandson, Fonpon. She forced herself to think of something else.

"What were you like as a child? Very beautiful? Oh, yes, I'm sure you were."

"Quite enchanting. Covered with freckles and bruises and scratches and scrubby and dirty. We had gipsies' ear grooms and stable boys, like most people on the border where our estates lie. The gipsy children were my friends. I got very sort of vermin and itch from them. When I think of my childhood I always smell stable manure.

"Then for a few years I was the terror of various schools. Then I was at the war for a bit. The war was fine. I felt at home in it. For all I cared it might have been a lot worse than it was. If there could only be another war I should be all right.

"Aren't you all right now, you fire-eater? What do you do? What kind of person are you?"

"And you? What kind of woman are you? I have never known a woman like you. But you make me inquisitive. I have a lot of questions to ask you. You are quite different."

"I am only old-fashioned. I am from another world, another century," Grusinskaya said, and smiled as she said it. Tears smarted in her eyes. "We dancers were brought up like little soldiers with iron discipline in the Imperial School of Ballet in Petersburg. We were little regiments of recruits for the princes of the grand dukes. It is said that those who grew too big when they were 16 and 17 were fixed round their chests to prevent them growing any bigger. I was small and thin, but as hard as a diamond. Ambitious, too, I had ambition in my blood like pepper and salt. I was made a machine of me. There was nothing but work, work, work. No rest, no leisure, never a pause. And then, fame always brings loneliness. Success is as ice cold and as lonely as the North Pole. And what it means to keep your grasp on success for three years, for five years, and 10 years, always on and on—but why do I tell you all this? Can you understand me? Listen. Often when you pass by a railway station waiting room or motor in the evening through a small town, you see people sitting motionless in front of the doors with stupid faces and their hands lying heavily on their knees.

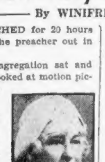
Deepest, Highest and Best, How Very Important!

By WINIFRED BLACK

HE PREACHED for 20 hours right along, the preacher out in Los Angeles.

And the congregation sat and listened and looked at motion pictures to keep awake.

Grand motion pictures—Rebecca at the well, and Ruth saying goodby to her mother-in-law, and little Saul, and his lamb—all in colors, too, mind you and propheta and angels, and Cherubim and Seraphim and everything.



Winifred Black

And everybody was happy and the preacher—oh, he was delighted!

Didn't he win the long distance record, as a Marathon preacher?

Why, he prayed and preached two hours longer than the preacher in Washington, D. C. Who wouldn't be proud of a record like that?

What did he say? Oh, he just preached—all about Adam and Eve, and Moses and Aaron and Pharoah's daughter, and the wonderful little boy she found in the bullrushes.

A preaching Marathon—well, what shall we have next? Who will die obligingly so we can give him the longest funeral that was ever accorded a human being?

The longest ways, the quickest trip, the deepest lake, the highest mountain, the tallest man, the meanest woman, the homeliest girl, the boldest thief, the smartest child—dear me, how we do love the "ests" in everything.

What's the difference what the preacher says, as long as he keeps talking?

What do you care where you go, as long as you go fast?

Who cares what you eat, so long as you eat more, and faster, than anybody else?

What on earth has got into us, anyhow?

Can't any of us be satisfied living our own lives in our own way without trying to live longer and faster, and more, than our neighbors?

Make it snappy—step on the gas, don't fall behind the parade, jump in the hand wagon. Dear me, is life nothing but a circus parade?

What's the fun of driving so fast that you can't see a thing but the dust?

What's the use of rushing from one set of stupid streets, full of dull people, to another set of dull streets, full of stupid people?

I met a man the other day who'd just come back from Abyssinia.

He didn't know a thing about Abyssinia, or the Abyssinians or the lions or the tigers, or anything—but he'd been there and that was that.

I'm going to open the glass door onto the balcony and go out there and sit and watch the good old sun set in glory, and mark the rising of the silver moon and say to myself again the childish couplet:

"Star light, star bright,
First star I've seen tonight."

And I don't believe I'd be a bit happier if I saw the sun and the moon and the stars this very night in Mozambique or Carcassonne—and it's a lot easier to get out on the balcony.

Cooking on a Hike in Woods

EVEN THOUGH your boy or girl may not belong to the Scouts, there's sure to be at least one day this summer when they'll time to get up some equipment and start off for a day's hike—or longer, if you'll let them. And if there any better fun in the world? Especially if they've had a little home instruction in simple camp cookery. Burnt bacon may taste good in the woods, but it isn't half as healthy as properly pan-broiled bacon or square corn made by combining the fried bacon with thinly sliced fried onions and green corn cut from the cob.

A frying pan is, of course, a necessity, and caution, the kiddies to keep the pan as dry as possible while cooking. Pour the fat off as it melts, for if it's allowed to stay in the pan, the meat will fry instead of broil, and will be tough to eat. The fat may be poured into a cup or another pan and used for frying potatoes.

Little Irish Potatoes are delicious. They are made by cutting a core out of the center of a rather long potato, and stuffing, a small link of sausage in the hole. Close both ends with pieces of the potato core. Toward the last you can remove the cores if you want the sausages to brown. These are baked in the ashes of the camp fire.

The Murder of the Choir Singer

By ANTHONY ABBOT

"TO WHOM did you sell the property?"

Mrs. Wharton half closed her eyes and smiled at Thatcher Colt.

"It was a very mysterious transaction. The transfer was so peculiar that when I read of the murders in my old house I thought I ought to do what you asked and come right down into New York. I owned that house for 25 years. My father built it.

"When he died and left me the bulk of his estate I rented it out for many years. Then I decided after the death of my husband, that it would make a good home for me, so I had it redecorated and moved in and I watched the boats go up and down the river for a quarter of a century—and a century filled with many queer changes, Mr. Colt."

"THEN I got lonesome," continued Mrs. Wharton as Colt listened attentively. Every summer I go to the mountains or the seashore. Sometimes I go to Sweden, and during the very cold months I am always in Florida or Havana. It got so that I was at Sangster Terrace only a few months of the year. Why keep it up?

"Why, indeed?"

"So several years ago I decided to live in a hotel and rent the house furnished. My real estate agents advertised the house and rented it to a woman who gave her name as Mrs. Evelyn Saunders. I remember at the time that the agents wrote me that she had given an excellent reference—a clergyman of a well-known church in New York.

GOOD TENANTS

"The rent was paid regularly, and I thought nothing more of it. Then last February I received an offer for the property. It came from someone in Chicago. The deal went through without my ever seeing the purchaser. I was paid the entire amount in cash.

"That is indeed singular," remarked Thatcher Colt. Do I understand that your agents never saw the purchaser?"

"I am sure that they never did," replied Mrs. Wharton vigorously.

"May I ask their names?"

"Leikowitz, Murphy and Baker."

"How did they receive the money?"

"In a check from the Chicago brokers of the purchaser."

In a few moments Colt was talking to Mr. Murphy of Lefkowitz, Murphy & Baker. The conversation was brief and to the point. From Murphy he learned that the Chicago brokers were Beiden & Belden, Inc., and the name of the purchaser was Daniel Darrell of 9642 McSwain ave., Chicago.

"It seems extraordinary to me," remarked Colt, as he replaced the receiver, "that we have heard no word from Mr. Daniel Darrell. Unless he reads no newspaper, he must know by this time that two people have been murdered on his property. Still, Mr. Darrell preserves his curious anonymity."

THE PERFECT CRIME.

Mrs. Basil Wharton clasped the hand of the police commissioner with fervent enthusiasm.

"Oh, Mr. Colt," she exclaimed, "the only pleasure I get out of life is reading detective stories. It's perfectly jolly to come this close to one in real life. The thing that fascinates me is the possibility of a perfect crime. Do you think this could be the perfect crime?"

Colt smiled grimly.

"Not yet," was his answer. "Thank you, and goodday, Mrs. Wharton."

Back in his office in Center st. Colt's first act was to put through a long-distance telephone call to Chicago for Martin Shevery, the chief of the Windy City police. With the lightning service which the telephone company accords police officials, Colt and Shevery were greeting each other three minutes later.

"Hello, Shevery. Will you help me out on this Beazley-Saunders case? Good. I want a description of a man named Daniel Darrell, who lived at 9642 McSwain ave., Chicago, last February, although I don't think you'll find him there any more.

"He bought the house at No. 13 Sangster ter., in which the murders were committed, and the sale was very peculiar.

"The deal was put through by a Chicago real estate firm known as Belden & Belden, Inc. Ever hear of them? Young Belden is your son-in-law? Well, that's a break. I want a description and the man's present whereabouts, if possible. And, Shevery, I am wiring you by the telephoto process pictures of a half dozen people connected with the case.

"Show those pictures to your son-in-law and also to anybody else who ever saw Darrell, and let me know if they recognize any of them! Soon as you can. Thanks, old man. I'll do as much for you some day."

Anticipating Colt's request, I had already summoned by house telephone Merkle, the camera man.

"Telegraph to Shevery pictures of Gerald Curtainwood, Colonel Powell, Powell's secretary, Ellery Chadwick, Saunders, and Paddy Curtainwood. Make it snappy, Merkle."

Capt. Israel Henry now entered the room to inform us that Willie Saunders and his daughter had arrived.

"Bring them in" said Colt with obvious satisfaction. "There is one detail I want to clear up which I think Isabel can supply."

The father and his daughter showed some evidence of their new importance. The suit which Willie Saunders was wearing was obviously new as were his shoes, tie and hat. Isabel was in the newest and most fashionable of mourning.

COLT DOUBTFUL

"There is only one question that I want to clear up," said Thatcher Colt, "and I would like to make it perfectly plain to you how important I consider this point. We must be absolutely frank. You now realize, Mr. Saunders, that your wife was fond of Beazley?"

"I guess she was."

"Didn't you suspect it long before?"

"Well, maybe I did, but if I did I wouldn't let myself think about it."

Colt turned to Isabel.

"And you," he said. "Did you know anything about it?"

"Nothing whatever."

Colt did not press the point, although I saw the doubt in his eyes.

"At least," he continued, "we know now that Mrs. Saunders met Beazley at the Sangster Terrace house. In forming a theory of the crime, I am assuming that some enemy of Mrs. Saunders or of the minister, or of both, gained secret access to that house."

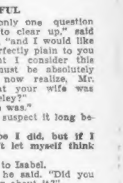
Walking Along the Path to Beauty

By MISS HUDDLESTON

ANY WOMAN who doubts the importance of correct poise while walking need only think back to the history of Ancient Greece. Walking was then an art, and credited with being responsible for the great beauty, grace, and charm of those women of other days. Correct walking posture is beautifully feminine and it permits the breathing apparatus to function properly, thereby adding a rosy glow to otherwise pale cheeks.



Josephine Huddleston

I've frequently written on walking with a rhythmic swing to the body, but today I want to talk on the simple art of walking, with the body held in correct position so that the head may be held high and to encourage a graceful swing to the shoulders that marks the woman of dignity and culture.

Of first importance in this graceful walking exercise we must keep our heads high so that the chin tilts upward at an angle. In practice, however, a book should be placed squarely on top of the head, then following an imaginary straight line, and taking short steps, walk up and down the room for five minutes. The arms should hang relaxed at the sides.

Don't think I'm going to waltz you down with books, but there is important to the exercise. Now place a book on each shoulder (as well as the nose on the head), and repeat the walk for a few minutes. Then place the hands on the hips and, still balancing the books, repeat the straight line walking.

The best time to practice walking is just before retiring, and the windows should be wide open to permit fresh air. You'll not only find that your carriage will improve but the body will relax as you walk and so the exercise serves to smooth out ragged nerves and compel peaceful slumbers.

Don't Be Love's Doormat

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been reading your column for a long time, and now I come to you for help. I am in love with a boy a little older than myself and he claims he loves me. He calls me in almost every night and we talk for a long time. I have asked him out to the house many times and he says he will come out some time. Every time I bring up the subject he says he does not have much time, but he seems to have time to take other girls out. On a Sunday he goes out with his friends and, when I mention going out with girls, he says he were the boys. He is very jealous. One night he acted terribly, but the next day he made up and was serious. Since then I have never heard from him. I love him dearly. I thank you for any information you can give me.

WORRIED.

Dear Worried: Why waste time and affection on a trifler? A boy who doesn't even come to see you, says he has no time but goes out with other girls, etc. Summon your pride, don't let anyone make a doormat of you. Go out and have a good time with someone else. Forget him.

ALDOUS HUXLEY & CO. CALLED BELLY THINKERS

—By Gilbert Seldes—

IN WHAT CONNECTION I called Aldous Huxley a scholar and a philosopher I do not recall, but I am willing to take the blame for it because Mr. Michael V. Gannon, of Atlanta, Ga., virtually accuses Mr. Huxley of being a devoted reader of this column, which would be a compliment, and a follower of mine, which is impossible. Mr. Gannon seems to have a "down" on most people who write for newspapers or anything else, and I sympathize with him. It's a beastly life, but easier than any other.

GILBERT SELDES

Who's a Philosopher?

"I believe you to be a philosopher," he writes. "I am convinced that I am one, and Mr. Huxley may be, for all I care—but that he is a scholar I beg leave to doubt.

"It is amazing to me how many belly thinkers are considered scholars these days. Mr. Huxley's learning appears to represent no less superficial sources than Sunday colour sections and newspaper columns; among them, my dear Mr. Seldes, yours. Mr. Van Vechten and he are classmates. Each is fond of impressing his erudition by the inlay of haphazard things gleaned. I should say, from the works of Doctors Copeland, Brady and Fishbein; Professor Slosson, Beebe and Haskin, and Rt. Rev. Glenn Frank, Coolidge, Laurence Stallings and H. L. Mencken.

"I see nothing in that stalwart thinker, Mr. Huxley, beyond the urge that might have made him, somewhat younger, stick his head in the church door while service was in progress, and shout '——'."

You will have to supply you own favorite bad word at this point. Although Mr. Gannon's choice is comparatively proper, it is not proper enough for what Mencken calls a family newspaper.

Good Young Huxley

The rest of the letter is a criticism of Huxley for pretending to have obtain information about unimportant subjects, and as it deals with the proper pronunciation of the name of a Pekinese pup, I recede into dark silence. But I think there is something to be said for young Huxley. He is a good observer; he knows a great many things and writes well about them; he does not let himself be led away by enthusiasm or indignation. He has even a kind of piety. He may be wrong on Mayan architecture and Eskimo pie, but he is a scholar of humanity, and something more than a belly thinker.

Precomputation Made Easy

Another correspondent, Master Mariner Dudley Baker, is far more kind. Because I confessed ignorance of the methods employed in the position of an aeroplane hours ahead, he does not scold me; he instructs. I like that, but my complaint, which is the complaint of most educated people, is that I cannot understand the explanation which my seafaring friend assures me is so simple.

I wish that, by the way of experiment, the present owners of the Leviathan would place her once in the hands of a well-educated, modern, sophisticated man, and let him direct the ship to Europe, without any previous training in navigation. (It might be just as well to have a captain or two on board, just to make sure he didn't try to go up the Hudson.) I should like to know whether a modern man would be utterly helpless, whether some vaguely remembered data would come to his mind, whether instinct and knack would carry him through.

Columnist Called Overpaid

My critics are not all favorable today. The editor of a paper in Springfield, Mass., pays me compliments, but they rise from a confusion in his mind between me and my brother (who has been an excellent foreign correspondent, which I was not); and the rest of the editor's comment is that I am a fool and not worth a raise in salary. The reason is my mild suggestion for a moratorium on working between the ages of 29 and 30. Neither the loafing nor the thinking which could be done in that period has any appeal. It is all put down to spoofing or hot air. I am very dejected.

On the other hand, it is exhilarating to know that after years of being deplored, the movies are doing a bit of deploring on their own hook. I was startled to read a headline in a Boston paper the other day—"George Bancroft Says Humanity Is Ruined," or words to that effect. Mr. Bancroft was not talking about economics or politics; he was deploring the feminine prejudice in favor of crooning and soft-voiced heroes in the pictures. The era of the bold, brawny heman seemed to him to be passing.

Lunacy No Proof

Mr. Heywood Broun wrote the other day: "It is a notorious fact that most of our progress has come about through the work and sacrifice of far-seeing individuals who were considered odd creatures, the victims of a mild form of dementia praecox." I'd like to have figures on that, and names and works. And even if it were true, I would not accept, as a logical sequence, that all odd people and demented are likely to be the saviors of the race and the prophets of the future. It isn't even a fact that all who were crucified were divine. There were two thieves, and only one Christ.

Rudy Vallee

Rudy? The girls will love him now, as then.
The thing he gave them, he still gives, a dream.
His voice, close to their ears, still, still, will seem Calling to them alone, each evening when
He sings this heart out. All that hearer men
Forget to give, he gives, that worshipping
That women need. He is their certain king
Because no can make each a queen again

He is the sweetheart of each girl who makes
Out of her dreams a man too strong and fine
To be a living being. Her heart breaks
Because no breathing lover is devine.
Until the men we meet are gods, he'll give
With just a voice that joy for which we live.

Men's Wants

—By Diana Bourbon—

WELL, WELL, WELL—the old subjects go best after all, don't they? Here's a puzzled young woman—"Anxious 20," she calls herself—writing to ask what the modern man really does "want" from his wife. At the risk of being strangled I'll tell her.

More than anybody has a right to expect from any single human being! But—so have husbands (and for that matter wives) from the beginning of the world! You have only to read the story books in which man has always realized his secret dreams to find that out.

The strange part is, that though it is natural enough to yearn for perfection in everything, no one seriously expects to get it—except in the person they marry. From them, even sensible and otherwise intelligent people make the most fantastic demands. Perhaps because of the "and they lived happily ever after" tradition in which we were all brought up from our nursery days.

You can't have any idea persistently dinned into you during your most impressionable years, without absorbing some of it.

* * *

And so, though we heatedly deny it when questioned, and tell our own selves repeatedly what fools we are, yet deeply and subconsciously, we go on regarding marriage as a sort of panacea for all earthly ills—a barrier on the other side of which everyday things like temper and failure turn to honey and gold automatically.

That being so, we're doomed to disappointment. So is the modern husband.

* * *

But, quite apart, and acres distant, from the things he wants, are the things he really needs. And those are: someone to look after him without ostentatiously "fussing."

Someone to whom his interests and welfare are absolutely paramount.

A Fearless Survey

—By Charles Hanson Towne—

NOT EVEN IN "MAIN STREET" has a certain cross section of American life been better described than it is in "The Little Green Shutter," by Brand Whitlock. Appleton has just brought out this small volume.

But it is not fictional! It is the unvarnished truth. The little green shutter is that little swinging door which used to hang in every saloon from Maine to California in pre-prohibition days. And Mr. Whitlock, who writes like a breeze, gives us, in his initial chapter, a gorgeous picture of his boyhood town in Ohio. How drab it was, and how the row of saloons on Market st. sought to lend a bit of color to the lives of those unfortunate enough to reside in such a place!

Charles H. Towne

"In summer there was the camp meeting, and Robinson's circus, which wintered in the city," as we called Cincinnati. In the fall there were the County Fair and the political meeting, and in the winter the revival and the criminal trials . . . But that was about all except a 'show' now and then at the Opera House; but they couldn't fool those old Methodists by calling a theater an Opera House, and it was a sin to go there. The only exception made was in favor of Haverly's Minstrels."

* * *

Such was this bleak little town. All natural joy seems to have been crushed out of it. No wonder men got drunk occasionally. Then, with swift strokes, Mr. Whitlock paints a picture of the coming of the Women's Crusade. "The women, after holding a meeting of prayer, would go forth in a band and visit the saloons along Main st. They would boldly enter, kneel down in a ring on the floor and pray that the saloonkeeper might be converted to a better way of life." Those kneeling women formed the nucleus of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, which in time was to put the saloon out of business.

Thence on, Mr. Whitlock whirls into a discussion of the Eighteenth Amendment—and its evils. His is a compact survey of the whole situation regarding Prohibition. Fearlessly he assails this incredible law which has been forced down the throats of American citizens—freemen who have become slaves. In the far-off glamourous days a moderate drinker "was an insidious influence, not only working for evil but, what was worse and wholly unpardonable, invalidating the tee-total argument, for he showed that a man might use liquor and yet not beat his wife, defraud his creditors, destroy himself body and soul, and fill a drunkard's grave."

Not a Pretty Picture

It is not a pretty portrait that he paints with a deft pen. He shows us all the humbug of the American mind. Under the Eighteenth Amendment, "certainly no such blow had ever been dealt to individual liberty, and there was something ironical in clapping a nation of freemen, just emerged from a victorious war for democracy and liberty, under the tutelage of monitors who were to regulate their personal habits." And he goes on: "If liberty is not personal, of what value is it? What security, what happiness, what life can it bestow?"

His arguments would seem unassailable to any thinking man or woman. "If Washington and Franklin and Madison and their colleagues in the convention that framed the Constitution had ever, for a single moment, dreamt of the possibility of government's presuming to tell its citizens what they were to drink, they would have inserted a clause forbidding anything of the sort; and Hamilton and Jefferson would have found something at last on which they could agree."

Did you know that Prohibitionists are Manicheans? Neither did I, until I read this book. Even Mr. Whitlock did not know what a Manichaean was until a brilliant rector had shown him; and I must refer you to this volume to make the discovery for yourself. You will receive new light on the workings of the reformer's mind. A mere quotation would not be enough. You must discover for yourself. And the discovery will be well worth your while.

Alas! In the old days in such a town, "almost the only means of escape from the hard realities of a dark existence were religious emotionalism on the one hand, or drunken debauchery on the other; it was either the 'revival' and the camp-meeting, or the public-house and the sample-room."

* * *

A Great Service

And when Mr. Whitlock gets down to our own sad day, in speaking of industrial efficiency and mass-production, he has these wise words to offer: "To hear people talk one would have thought that in the days before prohibition all the working men in the land were nothing but a lot of lazy toss-pots who invariably got drunk on Saturday night, and after they had spent all their wages in the saloon, went home and beat their wives, and that the only way to cure them of these distressing habits was to take away their beer."

Somehow, in those wicked days, great inventions were made known to us. We achieved the motor, the flying machine—yes, and railroads and steamboats and the telephone and telegraph; and these were manufactured for the benefit of mankind. Laboring men lolled about. But the prohibitionists will not admit these plain facts.

Our prisons were to be emptied and the millennium was to come. It is not so, but no reformer will speak of these things now.

Poverty was to be abolished and prosperity assured by Couéism: "everybody, on rising each morning, was to repeat the magic formula 'Every day, in every way, I am getting richer and richer.'"

With biting satire Mr. Whitlock says all this and more. And then, like the assured novelist he is, he gives us at the end another picture of the town in Ohio where he began. The saloons are gone, to be sure. But everyone is drinking there now. A sorry spectacle it is, and one to make the decent citizen shudder.

Let everyone read this book, and ponder. Mr. Whitlock has done an immeasurable service for his country.

News and Gossip of Greater Boston Society

In Mayfair

—with—

Mary Christie

During the vacation of Betty Alden, her daily column, "Beacon Hill," will be replaced by this column of interesting New York society and literary gossip by May Christie, famous English writer, now living in the metropolis and writing of her experiences there.

SNAPSHOTS ON THE MAIDSTONE CLUB BEACH!

MAIDSTONE INN, EAST HAMPTON, L. I., Aug. 1.

Frederica Gallatin, that beautiful young blonde girl known as "Freddie," reclining face downwards on the sands in a white bathing suit.

May Christie

Nancy Gallatin, "Freddie's" older sister, slim, brunette, and also VERY lovely to look at, extended on the sands in deep confab with Mr. Fred Bouvier, attractive young bachelor.

The rays of old Sol strike broilingly upon their sun-tanned backs. (For they are reposing face downwards)...But what do they care?

Exotic Beach Beauty

Like her blonde sister, Nancy Gallatin has heaps of beaux. She wears a jade green bathing-suit that clings scantily to her dee-vine young form. Her eyes are half shut as she talks. She draws symbols in the sand, to illustrate some points. Every now and then she shakes her curly dark locks. She is an exotic, fascinating-looking damsel...

Elinor Sheedy...A sub-debutante who will make her bow to society on Thanksgiving night...chats vivaciously upon the beach, in a white bathing suit with a smart patent leather belt round her slim waist.

Pretty Blonde

Carol Barnes, another sub-debutante who is at East Hampton for the season, is sitting beside Elinor on the sands. She is a very pretty blonde in a peach colored swim-suit, with a gay green belt around her waist. Carol will burst upon Mayfair and its giddy rounds of parties next winter.

"Babes" Gardiner, a golden-haired Lorelei of floating locks, enormous liquid eyes, and tall and exquisite young figure, ought to be listed in this chronicle as the flower of the flock!

Among all those delectable debs and sub-debby beauties, the luscious "Babes" stands out!

She is a real dyed-in-the-wool beauty . . . whether with her long locks floating, or severely brushed back into a tight knot at the base of her neck.

And a vision in her bright pink silk pajamas, with a blue sash . . . there is a Greek effect about the draping on the corsage.

. . . If I would say that I envy being trite I should say that "Babes" on the edge of the blue sea, looks like a goddess of the Greek Isles . . .

"Gardiner Hotel"

She dwells in a big house down here, whose hospitable doors are ever open. It is affectionately referred to as "The Gardiner Hotel" by her many friends.

She was with her brother, also affectionately referred to as "Our Winnie" . . . (And what a nice boy HE is, and very amusing, too!) . . . and a young man called Billy Mars.

(Quite a suitable name for one who associates with a goddess!)

I have had several chats with "Babes" . . . and in case you may think that with so much pulchritude she lacks grey matter, allow me to inform you that she's a very intelligent young girl . . .

Jane Erdmann, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John Frederic Erdmann, resides in "Cockwould," on Lily Pond lane . . . Quite a show place.

Family Gallery

The figures of the family . . . life size or perhaps bigger . . . are cut out in the box green of the hedge surrounding the house!

Jane is a very interesting and original young woman. After seeing Jane sculptured in shrubbery as I drove past "Cockwould" I would naturally expect her to be a little above the average young girl.

She believes in reincarnation. (And isn't it unusual in anyone of her age to be thinking either of the past, or the hereafter . . .?) Well, I understand that Jane in her previous incarnation was A WHITE LEOPARD! She sports a white leopard on the door of her car . . .

Justine Heyward is another very definite young woman. A pretty picture in her Turquoise blue bathing suit . . . She is deeply tanned. Justine has many beaux, but confesses to no career.

"I would love to have a career," she tells me rather plaintively, letting some sand trickle through her fingers and staring at it as it slipped away as though it were marking the quick flight of the years . . .

If I would, she is absurd, for Justine IS but a young girl.

Likes Backgammon

And what a backgammon fiend is she . . . she adores it!

Rosalind Kress plays backgammon every day with Justine on the Maidstone Club Beach.

She is a very pretty girl, and has dabbling with "A career" herself . . . though richly endowed with this world's goods.

Rosalind has designed and manufactured several kinds of pajamas, and—along with her friends, Justine Heyward and Catherine Fish—will sport the snappiest and latest of her pajama designs at the big fair to given here on the village green.

These delectable garments she has called "NAUTICAS PANTS" . . . and isn't THAT a delightful and APT name for them . . .?

For on one side of the pajamas is a red "P"—for "Port"—and on the other a green "S"—for "Starboard" . . .!

Engaged to Wed

Catherine Fish is a perfectly charming little brunette girl. Looks about 18, and is of the Gypsy-ish type of beauty. She is a cousin of Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, and is engaged to a young naval gentleman . . . (And how appropriate of her to wear the "Nautical Pants"!)

His name is Ensign Thurlow Weed Davison.

He's a New Yorker . . . a very handsome blond . . . and is on U. S. S. Texas.

Catherine confided all this to me herself.

"If you find the right man, one should get married young, I think," she said thoughtfully as we reclined on the sands, "I don't think a career should be allowed to stand in the way of love . . . do you think so?"

Emphatically I did NOT . . . and what's more I have always practised what I preached on that subject!

"I'M looking forward SO much to traveling all over the world with my husband when we get married," said pretty little Catherine Fish, blushing delightfully.

Linen With Embroidery

By ANN ARDEN

SINCE GARDENS and gardening have become so smart we find all sorts of helps in wearables and innovations in gadgets to add to the comfort and fascination of this delightful pastime. Not that the colorful peasant smock pictured must needs be confined to the garden; a mere porch sitter would be decorative in it; to hop into one's roadster for morning errands, or to spend lounging on sunny sands this gay garment would find a welcome. A woman who lives in the country, and rather elegantly at that, has bought for herself a whole collection of these fascinating Russian peasant blouses or smocks. They are entirely hand-made, even the linen being hand-woven.

* * *

This evening—we're in Maine now—yes, we travel fast—and tonight—Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Douglas Dillon, of New York and Dark Harbor, are giving a large dinner dance in honor of their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. C. Douglas, Jr.

Mrs. Dillon, Jr., is known to us all as the delightfully vivacious Phyllis Ellsworth of Vincent Club fame, whose marriage took place in March.

She and her husband expect to leave soon on his extended trip to Honolulu, which will be a sort of postponed wedding trip, as the bridegroom was finishing his senior year at Harvard at the time of his wedding. When they return, they will live in New York.

THE COLORS and designs are characteristic of the country, and no two are ever exactly alike. The peasant linen stands up under the stiffest sort of an ordeal—including many visits to the laundry; they have a lot of quality in them, and the colors are delightful to the eye. The model pictured is embroidered in red and black, and a further Russian touch is evident in the brilliant fringe-edge girdle of red, black and gold. The large garden hat is of white straw, fringed about its entwined brim.

ANN ARDEN will answer questions concerning clothes, social customs or fashions generally. Address your questions to the Boston Evening American or the Boston Sunday Advertiser or to Station WAAB.

MY ROMANCE

Rudy, as Suitor, Worked Hard to Win Heart of Girl of His Love

Chapter VI.

What are the qualities in Fay that inspire my deepest love? Why did I fall in love with her, and why did I find that love constantly increasing?

But before I discuss that, I should like, if you will permit me, to clear up a few misapprehensions.

Some time ago an article appeared purporting to give my ideas of a so-called "perfect" girl. And the article implied that I was going about in search of this "perfect" dream girl. It was a lot of silly nonsense, and created the wrong impression.

PUT IN WRONG LIGHT

Who am I to aspire to a "perfect" girl, even if such a phenomenon existed. Certainly I am far from perfect. And I have no qualities which would make me a good husband. But this article conveyed the impression that I set myself up to become sort of mighty, perfect creature who would deign to marry when he found the perfect mate he deserved. I felt like dropping through the floor when I read it.

It set me up in an entirely wrong light.

Naturally I have always had some idea of the kind of girl I hoped to marry; but I was not so foolish as to demand perfection in any degree. And I certainly never thought that when I found the right girl it would be merely a question of announcing myself and having her fall at my feet.

On the contrary, I have always felt that when I found the girl I desired I would have some difficulty in making her believe me desirable, . . certainly there are questions about my personality, or attractiveness. I discovered long ago that mine was the part of the aggressor. Without being unduly modest or ungrateful to nature, I believe I have not the handsome features that constitute natural attraction.

So, long ago, I made up my mind that when I did happen to find the girl with whom I thought I would be happy, I would have to make every effort to induce her to return my love.

HE WAS THE SUITOR

And with Fay I was certainly the impetuous suitor from the beginning. I had to prove whatever worth I had. And as her work and ambitions brought her in contact with more personable and attractive men than I, it was a big task I faced. But with the persistence which, on which is my nature, I started my campaign to win her.

I have always been accustomed to working hard for what I ever finally got, but my ambition has always lighted its way over obstacles. From early years I have been accustomed to throwing myself whole-heartedly into whatever task I face.

The first work I ever did, in my father's drug store in Westbrook, Maine, was not entirely to my liking, but I never shirked any of it. When I got my first job outside I went to work at a motion picture theater for $7 a week, I threw myself into the job and worked as hard to as I did when I went to Hollywood to make a picture at $11,000 a week. And on through my career, working at my music, earning my own living and tuition at the University of Maine and at Yale, playing in a band in London, seeking a job in New York, after graduating from Yale, making my way into night club work and broadcasting — throughout my career, even when things looked dark, I have never lost my enthusiasm for the job in hand. Although there have been many obstacles in my path, I have never considered my early life a bitter struggle, for I never allowed myself to be embittered. I have always had unbounded gusto and physical energy which were not dulled by the exertion which my work demanded.

CURIOUS ABOUT HIM

So, with the same spirit of determination I set about winning Fay. I was aided by the fact, as I related in a previous chapter, that she already felt I was to figure in her life in some way. So, naturally, she had a certain amount of curiosity about me.

She told me afterward that during the early stages of our courtship, as we dined, danced and swam at various places in Hollywood, Santa Monica, and Los Angeles, she liked me more than she allowed me to believe. But she wanted to know every side of me so that she could be sure I was the man with whom she could be happy.

In the meanwhile, of course, I was learning more about her. I was more and more captivated with the charm of each successive phase of her character. But I saw in her also an intriguing mystery.

I believe that one of the prime requisites of happy marriage is a community of tastes, of likes and dislikes, between man and wife. From the beginning it was evident that we possessed this basis for happiness.

WINS HER PROVAL

We both like a simple dignity of life and we particularly dislike vulgar ostentation. Before she came East I fitted out our apartment on Central Park West. I spent considerable time studying and buying those things I thought we should both like. But even then I experienced some trepidation when everything was in place. One can never be exactly sure what some one else will like. Although I believed I knew her tastes quite well, I had a slight feeling of alarm now and then as I surveyed my handiwork.

But my fears were entirely dispelled when, after our marriage in New Jersey, I brought her to our home. She was delighted. And I considered that a good omen, for it showed how well our tastes coincided.

Of course, I bought only the largest pieces of furniture. The little knick-knacks, the feminine touches which makes a place home, I left to her.

The furnishings are not elaborate, but they have a comfortable, gay, but nevertheless soothing air. Both Fay and I are very susceptible to surroundings, and fortunately we respond in the same manner to similar environments. That, by the way, is an important factor in establishing a basis for true companionship.

RADIO FEATURES MUSIC

Tribute Paid to Foreign Melody

By N. F. T.

Keen interest and prideful enthusiasm is evidenced among broadcasting musicians today, it being the eve of a new international series of concert transmissions. America and Germany begin utilizing air waves tomorrow for the purpose of exchanging melody renditions as an added means of promoting good will between music lovers of both lands.

Feeling that a gesture of the sort will indicate willingness on the part of Uncle Sam to honor music and composers loved on either shores, microphone bosses have scheduled a full hour for the initial offering, which will be heard on the NBC network of WEAF tomorrow between five and six o'clock.

No less a personage than "Papa" Walter Damrosch has been drafted to wield the trusty baton while an equal division of German, English, French and American selections are turned loose on the short waves.

• • •

MUSICAL LEAGUE OF NATIONS

As may be expected, jazz rhythm will constitute the Yankee contribution. However, none of the hoi-toloy-type syncopation prevalent in the repertoire of Duke Ellington will be trotted. Modern enough, the American bits will be found more or less of the high brow variety, with selections penned by George Gershwin featured.

Wagner and Brahms are said to be the German immortals whose compositions are on the menu, with Debussy creations chosen as most expressive of musical France. Vaughn Williams is the English personality being reflected on the program.

In this novelty presentation may be found an hour likely to win wide approval on two continents. Radio executives yesterday await public reaction to the idea.

One or two minor series are on hand asking why NBC and CBS are invariably inserted when publishing the names of radio stylus branding both networks. Explanation follows: William (CBS) Paley is boss man for Columbia and five three middle initials mean Columbia Big Shot. Merlin (NBC) Aylesworth, who directs Charles Nelson, tional, might justly be regarded as National Big Chief. Is that perfectly clear?

NIGHT BEFORE LAST

A bouquet was tossed in the direction of Gerry Harrison yesterday for the Braves Field description of Thursday evening's wrestling classic . . . An odd referee to orchestrate . . . Linus Travers should not be overlooked . . . Liney (to his pals) said at one point, "Gus Sonnenberg's a college man, you know, at least he attended Dartmouth." If someone calls this to Gus Smith, Billy Buchanan's station, the latter may see fit to take Mr. Shepard's premier announcement at 11 o'clock Tuesday morning. It will have an exhibit at the fair in 1933, has been busy at the State House during the past few days gathering data for his trip.

FOR CITIZENS ONLY

Rep. Felix Izzyk of Salem is anxious to have the state employ citizens on all building and road projects in place of aliens. He discussed the matter at length recently with the state commissioner of industry and labor.

HE LIKES EAST WINDS

Thomas M. Ray, one of Gov. Ely's secretaries, is rather plump and doesn't care much for torrid weather. "I will give you an east wind any time," he remarked to W. L. Reed, secretary of the governor's executive council to-day, when the latter entered a minute ahead of the time mentioned the east wind began drifting through the State House doors and windows.

CUPID IS BUSY

Rumor has it that Timothy Sullivan of the permit office, city public works department, contemplates to become a benedict this fall.

Bam, Bam! another precipitation of warfare between rival gangs of midisland, NBC master Jack Denny from Columbia, signing him for the Waldorf-Astoria hot spot about October 1. Denny has been abroad. Denny starts New York-ward from Montreal to assume his new duties August 11.

THIS EAR AND THAT AIR

Little Jack Little is said to have microphones embroidered on his kerchiefs and undies . . . whoops! Due to the influx of Malay string musicians in the big halls of radio, announcers have found new fun and diversion picking up the language and calling each other names in Malnyan . . . A "bohong" is said to be sure fire for inciting a riot among the pulmonate natives . . . No doubt Stevie will thumb through the big reference room geography trying to make an island out of Malay . . . Late flashes say Morton Downey is being urged to occupy a bright spot in one of the new shows taking shape on Broadway. Men who should know predict some radio surprises during August . . . Ardent admirers of Billy Jones and Ernie Hare, identity themselves as Ellis & Ellis. Carleton Sox, residing in a small midwestern town.

Swords and Bullets Cannot Harm Him

Foochow, China, Aug. 1 (AP)—The Big Sword Company has become the terror of brigands. The company is a group of law abiding citizens who have sent out stories that they are invulnerable to bullets, sword or lance. They are well armed and back up their story with vigorous attacks on bandits.

TRADE READY IN COLOMBIA

By FLETCHER WARREN

Former American Consul at Barranquilla, Colombia

"Some 30 or 60 years ago a New Englander by the name of William Ladd sailed from here with the first cargo of ice to be brought into Colombia. He continued in this business for some time and finally grew to like the South American country which he was supplying with ice so well that he bought up a large tract of land in the city of Barranquilla, which is the most important seaport in the Republic. There he settled, raised a family and though now an elderly man is a prominent force in the progress of that city. The tract of land which he purchased in Barranquilla is named 'Boston.'

So the people down there, because of what Mr. Ladd has done in helping to develop Barranquilla, feel a close attachment to the original Boston of our U. S. A.

There are two other important ties which should bind the Port of Boston with Colombia. First, the excellent banking facilities which this city offers Latin America. Second, Colombia is closer to Boston than to any other port on our Atlantic Seaboard.

Colombia offers New England one of the best foreign markets for her industrial products that she can find anywhere in the world. There is a demand for these products in Colombia and when you are able to inaugurate a direct steamship service to this country the traffic will grow in such proportion as to cause thousands upon thousands of dollars' worth of exports to be shipped to Colombia each year through the Port of Boston.

City of Boston Commercial, Industrial and Publicity Bureau, 80 Federal Street, Boston, Mass.

Please enter my name upon the membership roll of "The Port of Boston Society." I am not to pay any dues. My only obligation is my moral support.

I hereby promise to loyally uphold the purpose for which this organization stands; namely, to help make Boston the finest and busiest seaport from Florida to Maine.

Man About Town

By AL DUFFY

"Then they scrammed (I believe that is the word. At least, I recently heard a child of six use it to her brother), and were later caught . . . at a public beach."

Prof. Rogers in "This Is Life," The American Weekly.

Dear Professor:

Uh-huh, that's the word all right. "Scram," "beat it," "take it on the lam"—they are synonymous and they are all the 1931 models of such slang as "absquatulate," "vamose" and "skidoo" which were undoubtedly in high favor back in the days when you were running around Worcester.

But listen, professor, you're muscling in on my racket when you use words like that in your column. "Scrammed," "Georgia gal's a a. . . ," you've got your bone and had run my stuff under your by-line. These my eyes caught such words as "grailard" and "coranto" and I knew right away that you'd wrong. Duffy hasn't got those words in his vocabulary—at least he didn't have them until he read 'em just now in "This Is Life."

How do you like columning, professor? Some time ago I said that you got it softer than I have, though. You only turn out five columns a week to my six. That means that there are two mornings each week you can wake up without facing that terrible question, "I wonder what am I going to write about today?"

By the way, I spent the day with a pleasant group of yours recently, Bob Benchley. He's one of those "I'm from Worcester" guys, too. Bob spent the day in Boston and I was trotting around with him pretty much of the time. Don't ask me why he came here, because I don't know. I suspect, however, that he ran up to see a couple of girls. At any rate, he arrived about noontime and we immediately repaired to the Parker House for lunch. Bob's boy lay in a meal? He ate fish until I thought he'd sprout fins any minute. Then we strolled uptown and fooled around for a while. Along about 6 o'clock we went to the Touraine for dinner and Master Benchley again demonstrated his prowess. Even Angelo, the headwaiter, was a bit surprised at the plain and fancy eaters in his day, was forced to stand there and admire the joy of work that Bob did on that meal.

"There," I said to myself, "that ought to hold him." If he eats again in a week I'll be surprised as well." But I was counting without Benchley.

Along about 9:30 Bob suddenly turned to me.

"Say," he said, and there was an unmistakable gleam in his eyes, "I remember a place somewhere around here where I used to get pig's knuckles and sauerkraut and beer. Is it still open?"

"You mean Jake Wirth's," says I. "Yes, I believe it is still going strong, only its beer ain't what it used to be, they tell me."

"Jake Wirth's! That's the name of the place. Come on, le's go!"

So off we went and Herr Benchley proceeded to demonstrate just how a pig's knuckle should be man-handled.

Finally we waddled out of Jake's with the Benchley maw still unsatisfied. It seems the near beer proved powerful to whet his appetite for some of the real stuff. So nothing would do him but that I go some up for him. I finally managed to rustle up some Canadian ale and the last I saw of him at about midnight, he was sitting, for all the world like a fat little burgomaster, tossing off copious solfels of ale.

"That's your plan for you!

Well, so long, professor. Glad to have had this little heart-to-heart chat with you and if I can help you any time with the vernacular, just let me know. Meanwhile, no hard feelings—about your muscling in, I mean.

CHURCH NEWS

HOSPITAL BEDS PROVIDED BY CATHOLICS

The Catholic Commonwealth makes the statement:

"Still fewer are probably aware of information for which we are indebted to the interdenominational publication, "The Interchurch World Movement." This is that the Catholic Church has hospital beds enough to accommodate "everyone of its membership and an additional 8 per cent of the total non-Catholic population of the United States . . . The Protestant Churches of the United States provide hospital beds for only 43 per cent of their membership." We must make acknowledgment for this quotation to the "Campaigners for Christ Handbook," by David Goldstein, which under the imprimatur of Cardinal O'Connell, Archbishop of Boston, has recently in that city been published by Thomas J. Flynn Co. And in preparation, it is pleasant to note something that was unknown to anyone until it was reported at the recent meeting of the Catholic Hospital Association: namely, that 51 per cent of the patients in Catholic hospitals in 1930 were non-Catholics."

Christian Science to Consider "Love"

"Love" is the subject of the lesson-sermon which will be read in all churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, Aug. 2.

The golden text is: "The Lord, thy God, in the midst of thee is mighty; He will save, He will rejoice over thee with joy; He will rest in his love, He will joy over thee with singing." (Zephaniah 3:17).

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible:

"No man hath seen God at any time. If we love one another, God dwelleth in us, and His love is perfected in us . . . And we have known and believed the love that God hath to us. God is love, and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him." (I John, 4:12, 16.)

HOLLYWOOD NEWS By Louella O. Parsons

Loretta Young and Her Sister Sally at Work in Columbia Films

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor
Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, Aug. 1—Sunning himself on the beach at Santa Barbara, Eddie Cantor isn't giving work a thought. Flo Ziegfeld in New York and Samuel Goldwyn in Hollywood, however, are thinking of a job for this particular comic.

The reason is this. Ziegfeld has a musical comedy for Eddie, a typical Cantor vehicle which will open in New York in the fall. Samuel Goldwyn wants the rights of the musical comedy to star Eddie on the screen in the spring. Ziegfeld is willing but here is a new angle. The dramatists league of New York refuses to let any producer say in advance who will be in the movie version of a play.

Louella O. Parsons

This action is taken for the purpose of protecting the author and getting better prices. Yet a Cantor vehicle could be for no one but Cantor and in these hard times if Samuel Goldwyn were to produce it that would mean over a hundred people would have jobs.

Eddie is getting ready to go to Europe. When he gets to New York he will talk to the league and in his case it seems the league may make an exception.

Some way no one ever remembers Loretta Young and Sally Blane are sisters until they appear together. They do look alike. Both girls will be on the Columbia lot next week. Loretta in "Gallagher" and Sally in "The Ghost Gang." The latter has a certain newspaper atmosphere, while the former is a 100 per cent newspaper yarn. Robert Williams, who was to have brought his bare "Rebound" air to "Forbidden" is substituting in "Gallagher." Mr. Williams loves to play gay dog roles. The chances are by the time this is written Joan Marlow will be signed for one of the big parts in "Gallagher." How the studios do like the platinum blonde. She has become more than a fad, she has become a habit.

The much sought-after Mr. Cooper is convalescing from his abscessed ear. Jackie when well enough to work will not play in "Sooky," as you and I and the whole world thought. He will, on the contrary, take his vale', his secretary and his town car to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, where he has a date with King Vidor. "Sooky" has been postponed until Jackie can emote for Mr. Vidor in "The Champ." And I might as well give King warning if he wants Jackie to do any big emotional scenes he must not feed him a big lunch. Jackie can never act after he has eaten, and that is according to his own statement. "The Champ" has another important personage. In fact, I am afraid his role is equally as good as that of Mr. Cooper. His name is Wallace Beery.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: HETTY COMPSON wearing a huge corsage of orchids, dancing with HUGH TREVOR on the Embassy roof. Reports are now that they will be married before the end of the summer. MARY DUNCAN dancing with WILLIS GOLDBECH and apparently having a gay time. ROSCOE ARBUCKLE and ADDIE McPHAIL, Hollywood's latest turtle doves, dining together. KATHRYN CRAWFORD, pounds lighter, dancing with DANNY DANKER. ARTHUR LAKE, of the younger set, paying attention to FRANK LLOYD'S pretty daughter. NORMA TALMADGE wearing a smart dress in white with white fur-trimmed coat admired while dancing with GILBERT ROLAND. JOAN MARSH at the same table suffering from a sunburned lip. ROSCOE ATES without his stutter, stopping to talk to friends at the Brown Derby. That's all today.

COOLING COMEDY FOR SUMMER PICTURE FANS

Constance Bennett gazes upon the passing scenes of "The Common Law." (RKO Keith's.)

Marion Davies finds life one grand and glorious conquest of the masculine heart in Cosmopolitan's romantic film drama, "Five and Ten," now playing its first week downtown at Loew's Orpheum.

Claudette Colbert gives art to "The Smiling Lieutenant" at Uptown, Olympia and Fenway.

'Five and Ten' at Orpheum

Marion Davies' new picture, "Five and Ten," opened at Loew's Orpheum yesterday. In the picturization of the Fannie Hurst novel, Miss Davies eclipsed her own great achievements, blending humor and drama with an expert touch. As Jennifer, daughter of newly-rich parents, she offers a delightful and sincere performance, convincing and appealing in charm.

On stage, the vaudeville bill presents "Bomby," former favorite with Roxy's Gang, and his Radio Gang as headliners. Included in the personnel of the "gang" in addition to "Bomby," tenor, are Maria Vero, soprano; Mignon Sutorius, contralto; Mason Bachrach, baritone, and Floretta, accompanist. These exceptional singing personalities combine to offer a delightful, melodious program of popular classical and semi-classical selections, rendered both as solo offerings and ensemble numbers.

Montrose and Reynolds, widely-known variety comics, easily win premier comedy honors with their riotous hokum-singing and dancing offering, "Drugstore Cowboys," a miniature musical comedy revue, affords a pleasing concoction of singing and dancing entertainment. Other entertainers are the jesting Swede, Paul Nolan, in a comedy monologue, and Russell and Armstrong in a hilarious comedy melange.

Minstrelsy Is the Thing

The radio personalities, Pick and Pat, with the Radio Minstrels, will head the seven-act vaudeville bill at the Scollay, Monday. Also there will be the comedian, Jimmy Lucas, assisted by Geraldine Herbert, in a special skit, "The Vampire and the Fool of 1931." Other acts include Janis and Derex in "Things Will Happen," and Nat "Chick" Haines, who, with his company of five people, will offer a comedy, singing and dancing specialty, entitled in "Havana."

"Murder By the Clock," with William Boyd, Lilyan Tashman and Regis Toomey, is the feature film attraction.

Modern and Beacon

Charlie Ruggles stars in "The Girl Habit," now at the Publix Beacon and Modern.

Lassie Is Just Like Father

Dorothy Stone, famous daughter of Fred Stone and one of America's best known dancers, makes her vaudeville debut today at the RKO Keith-Boston. She is assisted in her dances by Charles Collins. Ralph Tomlinson is at the piano. Miss Stone is well known in musical comedy as co-star with her father, Fred Stone.

Max Zidas and Tom Currier, Boston boys known to radio audiences from coast to coast as "Hum and Strum," will also appear on the program. "Wild Cat Dugan" is the title of a skit utilized by Joe Besser to put over his comedy antics. The piece is described as a humorous episode of the Northwest. Others taking part are Dorothy Ellsworth, Dorothy Wallace, Harry Lang and Richard MacAllese. May Usher, singing comedienne, appears in "Modern Moments," and gives a series of lyric character interpretations.

Blissful Days in Venice

At the Fine Arts Theater a German romantic comedy called "Acht Tage Glueck" (Eight Days of Happiness), opened today. The story is laid in Venice.

The principal actors are George Alexander, who has starred in many German films; Dina Gralla, as a prize-winning typist, and Josef Schmidt, operatic tenor.

A knowledge of the language is not necessary to understand the story. The management of the theater provides a complete synopsis in English.

Marie Dressler Lifts the Lid on Laughter in Mirthquake

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

A rollicking good photoplay is "Politics," and the key to its merry triumph as entertainment is that inimitable pair of comedienes, Marie Dressler and Polly Moran. This picture is the latest in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer string of pictorial pearls, and the first release for the new film year. It is amusing in the fullest degree, a worthwhile contribution to a season which has not had over-many sterling offerings on screen.

Marie and Polly are a couple of ladies who are fired with the laudable ambition of cleaning the crooks out of their old home town. Polly and Marie live in the same house, the former being a music teacher, while Marie seems content with her household duties until the racketeers and the rascally politicians arouse her ire. When one that is dear to her is killed by the gangsters, she flies to arms, challenges the mayor and decides to run for his job. As manager she picks Polly; then the real fun begins.

The movie is not wholly comic, however. Inasmuch as Miss Dressler is one of the greatest of film actresses, she throws realism into the serious scenes, squeezes her lines for all the pathos they can bear, and gets in a strong grip on one's emotions.

But it is in the splendid comedy passages that the picture is even purer gold. None can withstand its humor, nor refuse to bend in hearty laughter. These two lady mimics were never better than here; less of the slapstick is noted, and more true acting, which is all the better.

The producers have done a magnificent job, and the initial M-G-M film of the year augurs well for the quality of the 47 other big pictures that are promised in the next 12 months.

None should miss Marie Dressler and Polly Moran in "Politics," now at Loew's State.

DISCUSSES DRAMA Nicholas Young

Colonial Leads the Fall Procession of Dramatic Attractions for Season

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

For the first time in many years the Erlangers are filching from the Shuberts the rather empty glory of setting off a Boston theatrical season. In another week Schwab and Mandel's "Free For All" will turn summer indolence into autumnal gaiety at the Colonial. Whereupon will come an end to the dismal emptiness of the spoken drama.

While any new season in the theater has its prophetic impulses, most of which usually disappear in astonishing disorder, the opening of the Colonial for a flight into music and words may be taken as a happy omen of better days to come. The deadly inertia of the drama since early days of Lydia Thompson and Pauline Markham appearing spring has been anything but encouraging. Neither the Shuberts nor the Erlangers have been able to give promise of any relief that might ease the mind of a fretful playgoer. Almost without warning came the news that "Free For All" would tempt climate and local conditions on August 10; would, in fact, brave the hazards of weather at any expense to show what Mr. Schwab and Mr. Mandel believe is good entertainment at any price at any temperature.

Nicholas Young

While the Erlangers have, in this manner, indicated grave intentions of production and activity, the Shuberts hold themselves to dignified silence. Formerly every playgoer anxiously awaited the Shubertian signal before embarking upon seasonal speculation; in other days Messrs. Schwab and Mandel set the pace as affiliated producers under the Shubert banner. But times have changed; empty playhouses have remained empty and there has been no Moses to lead his children out of the wilderness. Anxious, doubtful hours have oppressed those who craved a spoken drama and were willing to pay for its privileges. With these unwonted facts in mind it may be wholly in order to pin a ribbon of charity upon the expansive breasts of Mr. Lawrence Schwab and Mr. Frank Mandell. At least, in any manner of thinking, these boys are pulling the drama of Boston out of its subcellar.

If the Shuberts have surrendered primary honors to the hated Erlanders, they have dared, at least, to show forward a counter attraction. On Monday, at the Majestic, under Shubertian auspices, Soviet Russia's "Five Year Plan" will be revealed in film and voice. The pictures, you may be assured, are Russian; the voice which explains the scenes is English. This presentation of what is going on beyond the Volga is, we are told, largely industrial; simply workers at their jobs. From the official pictures it would appear that the ladies of the Soviet do most of the real work; wear overalls, run machines and take just enough time off for a dip in the communal swimming pool.

FANNING

—By GEORGE UNDERWOOD—

Connie Goes Crazy! Will Scrap the "A's." Stop Your Laffing.

Just a Pipe Dream. Yankees Look Good. Will Cop in 1932.

They're Managing "A's" for Connie Again

Here's some "inside information," broadcast out of Gotham Town. Gossiped widely, where on Boule Mich strolls Chicago, up and down. You can either take or leave it, here it is just as it lays—
Connie Mack again goes crazy and is going to scrap the "A's."

So Connie Mack is going to break up the great Athletic machine, eh? Going to dismantle the Juggernaut of 1931 just like he did the famous "A's" of 1914. Yea-a-h? Must be so, for scribes from Bagdad-on-the-Subway and the Boule Mich loudly clarion it as inside information. Inside information, huh? They probably need a drink. But anyway they tell us Old Connie doesn't like the idea of these runaway races. Says it's very bad for the health of the league, very bad. So out of the goodness of his great, generous heart he's goin' to scrap the Athletics this fall and give the other teams in the American League a chance. Heh! Heh! Heh! Hah! Hah! Hah! And a couple of Hee-Haws! Ain't those New York and Chicago scribes the funny fellers? Stop making me laff!

Connie going to dismantle the Athletics just like he did in 1914? Not a chance, bretheren and sisteren—not a chance! Not the ghost of a chance. Not in Connie's advanced age. He knows how long it takes to get a pennant-winning aggregation together. Old Connie hasn't forgotten the lean years, the hungry years, when the Athletics couldn't draw flies, let alone fans.

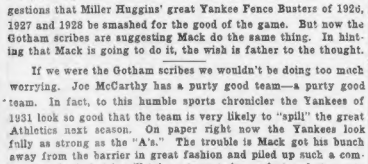
Besides Connie didn't ditch the "A's" of '14 just to help out the league or to have the extreme pleasure and thrills of assembling another pennant machine, as the New York and Chicago scribes would have us believe. The only reason Connie cleaned chip in 1914 was that he thought the team had gone the way of all flesh, had passed its peak, outgrown its usefulness and was sadly, desperately in need of new blood. That's why Connie wielded the axe in 1914. Consider the situation.

That great Athletic machine of 1914 in four years had won four pennants and three championships of the universe. Four years is a big stretch in baseball. So when the hitherto invincible "A's" dropped four straight and lost the World's Series to the lowly Braves—lowly as Connie had considered them in comparison with his great "A's"—Connie naturally thought the machine had blown out its cylinders and cracked for good. And oodles of other baseball experts thought the same thing. You couldn't blame 'em.

Who ever started that yarn about Connie dismantling the old "A's" just for the good of baseball had been buzzing in his bonnet. So have the ones who think Connie will dismantle the present Athletics for the same reason. If the "A's" of 1931 should drop four straight to the Cardinals, or whoever carries the National League banner in the next World's Series, just like the old "A's" flopped to the 1914 Braves, Connie may make some sweeping changes. But he will make them because he thinks his team needs 'em, not for any philanthropical reasons.

It's funny what a difference just a few hours make. Only a few years ago Gotham scribes were splitting their sides over suggestions that Miller Huggins' great Yankee Fence Busters of 1926, 1927 and 1928 be smashed for the good of the game. But now the Gotham scribes are suggesting Mack do the same thing. In hinting that Mack is going to do it, the wish is father to the thought.

If we were the Gotham scribes we wouldn't be doing too much worrying. Joe McCarthy has a purty good team—a purty good team. In fact, to this humble sports chronicler the Yankees of 1931 look so good that the team is very likely to "spill" the great Athletics next season. On paper right now the Yankees look fully as strong as the "A's." The trouble is Mack got his bunch away from the barrier in great fashion and piled up such a commanding lead that it will take a team twice as fast and strong to overtake it. There isn't anything human twice as fast and strong as the Athletics.



Speaking of the Yankees, if Miller Huggins were alive wouldn't he be tickled over thieving Benny Chapman! Miller wasn't satisfied with his great Yankee aggregation of a few years back. He conceded they were fairly good with the willow. In fact, Miller even owned up that as far as the bludgeon went the Yankees even were A No. 1. But the Little Man with the Big Baseball Head thought his Champions didn't play enough inside baseball, and especially were lacking in base running and base stealing.

Benny Chapman, the basestealingest fool in the American League, or any other league, would be the apple of Miller Huggins' eye. The kid is even remindful of Billy Hamilton, Max Carey and other famous hassock stealers of the days when base stealing was an art and poling 'em over the fence wasn't the whole blooming works. It's too bad Miller Huggins isn't alive and couldn't be sitting at Fenway Park this afternoon, or at Braves Field tomorrow, and see Benny Chapman pilfer hassocks. Pilfer 'em, perhaps. We say "perhaps" for Charlie Berry has a mighty good throwing arm. P. S.—Also a mighty good hip spin when they come at him with the steel. Ask Babe Ruth.

Old Sleuth Berry, watch those hassocks! Don't let Ben steal them away! Chapman's the basestealingest player we have seen in many a day. Charlie, you must play the copper, oil up your old soupbone paw, stop that thieving, robbing Yankee! Let him know that you're John Law!

SIX RIDERS IN BIKE CLASSIC

With six riders who are battling for the American motor paced championship ready to ride their legs off for the points that go toward deciding the title, the one-hour record at the Revere cycle track is apt to go tumbling down tonight.

The mark now is 44 miles 4 laps, held by Al Letourrier, but last week in a 50-mile race, three men bettered that distance in an hour.

Following the roaring motor cycles tonight will be Letourrier Franco Georgetti, the champion, who is fighting bitterly to retain his title; Franz Duelberg, Gerard DeBaets, Charley Jaeger and Freddy Spencer.

Diamond Dust

By JOE CASHMAN

Bruce Cunningham is Manager Bill McKechnie's choice to lead the Braves to their second straight victory over the New York Giants on the Polo Grounds, this afternoon. Lefty Bill Walker will attempt to keep the McGrawmen from losing any more ground in the pennant race.

Harry "Socks" Seibold, pitching one of his best games of the season, steered the Warriors to a 4-to-0 victory over the New Yorkers in the opening game of the engagement, which went 13 innings before a decision was reached. "Socks" hurled the entire distance and followed only six hits. The Tribe collected eight safeties off the combined deliveries of Freddie Fitzsimmons and Joe Heving.

The Giants took a one-run lead in the fourth but Red Worthington put his mates back in the running with a home run in the seventh. The Braves took a one-run lead in the eighth only to have the home boys knot the count in their half of the frame. Both sides then went scoreless until the McKechniemen put over two in the 13th to knock the Giants into third place.

The Chicago Cubs went into second place, 8½ games back of the Reds, by trouncing the champion and league-leading St. Louis Cardinals.

The Braves, despite their victory, failed to gain an inch on either the fourth-place Robins or the sixth-place Pirates, the former beating the Phils and the latter blanking the Reds. The Tribe is three games back of Brooklyn and three games ahead of Pittsburgh.

Both our Boston clubs have a better record today than they had on Aug. 1, when the Braves were in sixth with 45 victories and 53 defeats and the Sox were in the cellar with 43 wins and 65 losses.

The most improved club in either league over last year is the Cardinals. The National League champions were one game under the .500 mark and 11 games back of the top in a year ago today. Now they have 65 wins and only 37 losses to their credit and a lead of 8½ games.

Ben Chapman, Yankees' rookie outfielder who has 42 steals to his credit and is rated as the greatest base-runner since the passing of Ty Cobb, reached first but once and then was picked off. He roared, charged and stamped like an infuriated bull at the decision of Bill Dineen, but, of course, it did him no good.

Colored Giants Now Lead 'Twi' League

The Colored Giants gained the league leadership in the second half of the Boston Twi League, scoring an 8-to-3 victory over Roslindale last night. Roslindale had won three straight before succumbing to the Giants last night at Billings Field, West Roxbury.

Besides losing the game, Roslindale also lost the services of Andy Spognardi, captain and shortstop, who tore a ligament in his leg sliding into third base.

Waite-ing for Hoyt

By MYLES T. McSWEENEY

Detroit fans plan to hold a "day" for Waite Hoyt when the former Auto City hurler comes to the Tigers' ball yard with the Athletics on August 11.

On July 4, Hoyt celebrated Independence Day by being sent to the Philadelphia Athletics. He couldn't win a game while with Detroit, but since joining the Mackmen, he has won five.

Hoyt will be presented with a basket of fruit by Detroit fans—raspberries.

Admirers will scatter flowers on him—without removing them from the pots.

Waite's motto is—Win until it "Hoyts."

All up for the seventh!

LEGION POST TO HOLD MEET

The annual field day under the auspices of the North End Post No. 53, A. L., will be held at Fort Andrews, Boston Harbor, tomorrow afternoon.

Several sporting events are on the long and attractive program.

The feature of the day will be a baseball game between the North End Post nine and the Veterans of Foreign Wars team. Al Gerard, former bantamweight champion of New England, will hurl for the Post, and Louie Leonard, popular North End boxer, will take the hill for the Veterans' nine.

Dave Arata of the Argonne A. A. and Nick Russo will act as umpires.

Braintree Nine Plays Sinclair Post

The Sinclair Post, American Legion nine of Boston will clash with the Braintree White Sox in the second game of a series at the Marcella st. grounds, Roxbury, tomorrow afternoon. The Legion team won the first game at Braintree and is out to win the series on its home grounds.

Red Sox and Yankees in Twin Bill Tomorrow

By JOE CASHMAN

If you're planning to watch the Red Sox and Yankees in their double-header at Braves Field tomorrow, take our advice and get out there as early as possible.

This town has gone Ruth-crazy. The Babe suffered an injury which prevented him playing a complete game during the Yanks' first visit here and inclement weather made it impossible for the New Yorkers to get in a single tilt on their next trip to this neck of the woods. So all the boys and girls for hundreds miles around are determined to see the Bambino in action as often as possible during the current seven-game engagement at the Fens.

The largest week-day crowd of the season turned out for the opening battle. There were close to 17,000 present, including over 7000 women, or 2500 more than ever took advantage of Ladies' Day at the park previously. The grandstand was packed to the rafters before the contest even started and for the first time this year, the temporary seats in left field had to be thrown open to accommodate the overflow.

This guy Ruth is now playing his last season under a two-year contract which calls for a salary of $80,000 per annum.

Ruth Will Get Big Pay Next Year

He fell far short of leading in the home run race last year and is trailing his teammate, Lou Gehrig, in manufacturing circuit drives in this campaign to date, causing many critics to whisper that he will have to take a big cut in wages in his next contract or retire from the game.

Don't you believe it. He'll get as much, if not more, for playing next year and the Yankee management will be getting him dirt cheap.

For he's still the greatest drawing card the game has ever known and will be as long as he can bobble up to the plate, and, what's more, he's still the most valuable all-around player in either league, despite his age and his 17 years of service in the big show.

He attracted the season's largest week-day crowd to the park yesterday, something the World Champion Athletics, with all their headliners, could not have come close to doing, and then won the game almost single-handed.

After the Sox had taken a one-run lead in the fourth, the Yanks slugged it up and had two on and two out when Babe came up in the fifth after flying out on his two previous trips to the plate.

He worked Danny MacFayden for three balls and then when the "Deacon" tried to sneak a strike by, he clapped the ball against the scoreboard for a double to put the visitors two runs ahead.

"Babe" Is Big Shot of Yankee Team

His next appearance at the platter was as the lead-off man in the seventh. This time he again left safely to left. The drive didn't look good for more than a single and since he tripped in rounding first, nobody believed that he would try to stretch it but he kept on going and by a great slide, reached the middle sack safely, which made it possible for him to score the Yanks' fourth and final run on an infield out and a long fly.

Without Ruth, the McCarthymen would have had their troubles winning, for while Vernon Gomez, young southpaw, gave only five hits and only one run and fanned nine, he issued six passes which kept him in trouble almost all the way.

Had the Sox needed only one more run to win, they might have put it over, but Ruth's hitting changed the whole complexion of the game and killed whatever chance the natives had of finishing in front.

Worth $80,000?

Say, that lovable diamond genius is worth more than the other 399 major league players combined.

SUN BEAU HAS RECORD CHANCE

Chicago, Aug. 1 (AP)—Gallant Old Sun Beau has a chance today to become the greatest money winning race horse in the history of the turf.

This six-year-old campaigner owned by Willis Sharpe Kilmer, Binghamton, N. Y., if victorious in today's $36,000 Arlington handicap will eclipse the record established last year by the three-year-old sensation, Gallant Fox.

Sun Beau to date has won $302,784, and if he pokes his nose across the wire, winner of the handicap, his total earnings will $332,554 passing the record of $328,165 won by Gallant Fox.

DONNELLY REGAINS MASS. JUNIOR GOLF TITLE

DEFEATS JOHN QUINN AT SANDY BURR

By BILL GRIMES

On his fifth and final conquest Bill Donnelly, Jr., Woodland, established a precedent in Massachusetts Junior championship circles when he regained the title he lost a year ago.

Donnelly defeated John Quinn, Chestnut Hill, 2 and 1 this morning at the Sandy Burr Country Club. Although Donnelly was somewhat off form during the early holes and as a result was two down going to the fifth, he steadied down, squared the match at the eighth and then gradually pulled away to win.

Quinn played fine golf and although he was stroking his putts beautifully the breaks were not exactly with him on the greens. He had no less than three putts stop on the lip of the cup all of which had important bearing on the final outcome of the match.

Quinn can console himself, however, for two beautiful shots. His second shot to the 11th and a dead stymie at the 13th were something to marvel at. Quinn's tee shot at the 11th was faded by the wind and a partial flight and as a result he was stymied by a tree.

He selected to hook an iron around the tree and his execution was perfect, leaving him only a short chip which he played beautifully. He then dropped the putt for a birdie 4 and a win.

Donnelly's Putt at 13th Lips Cup

Donnelly's putt for a three at the 13th stopped on the lip of the cup, leaving Quinn a dead stymie. Donnelly's ball was in the middle of the cup and lined up from Quinn's ball.

It appeared as though it was an impossibility for Quinn to get his putt without knocking Donnelly's ball in. After carefully studying the lineup, Quinn putted his ball just skimming to the right of Donnelly's when it stopped for a fraction of a second and then dropped in for a half.

It was one of the most beautifully executed shots ever made in any championship and the Brookline boy was deservedly applauded for his feat.

Halved [illegible] and Second H[illegible]

After the [illegible] and the first and second [illegible]ulation par 4's, Donnelly [illegible]an iron well to the left of the third green, while Quinn was short. Donnelly's approach ran about seven feet from the cup and Quinn hit the back of the cup for a chance, the ball refusing to drop. However, the Brookline youth won the hole when Donnelly missed a putt.

Quinn picked up another hole at the fourth where he was home in two with Donnelly short. Donnelly was just enough off on his approach to be unable to get down with one putt and he dropped to 2 down.

Quinn was heavy with his iron from the fifth tee and landed in the rough, but Donnelly was on the bank to the right of the green. Quinn made a low running shot but it ran through and went to the back edge of the green, losing the hole to a three, when Donnelly chipped dead from the bank.

Both pushed their tee shots at the sixth and then Quinn dropped his second in the pond, while Donnelly was in the trap at the left of the green in two.

Quinn dropped back of the pond, pitched on and ran about 15 feet beyond the cup, very cleverly placed shot. Donnelly picked his ball cleanly out of the trap and it ran well by the cup, and his putt stopped about a foot short. Then Quinn stepped up and canned his 5-footer for a half.

Quinn Got a Break at the 7th Hole

Quinn got a break at the seventh when his approach landed on a hard spot on the fairway, well short of the green, and then ran on. Donnelly played the same shot, but his ball stopped on the bank running up to the green, from where he chipped on and got a half, when Quinn's ball stopped at the lip of the cup.

At the eighth Donnelly was short on the left of the green in two, with Quinn on the mound to the left. Both chip shots were short and then Quinn missed a 6-inch footer and a four, after which Donnelly dropped a 5 footer to square the match.

They halved the 9th with regulation 4's and then Donnelly went out in front for the first time at the short tenth where he was home from the tee and laid Quinn a partial Stymie, after the latter had kicked on to the hill at the left of the green.

Donnelly Made Fine Shot at 13th Hole

However, Quinn mussed up the 12th hole, where he half shanked his second shot into the rough, and was still short of the green after playing the third, with Donnelly right down the middle and on the apron of the green in two. Donnelly chipped by, and after Quinn had missed his 4, trickled in a five for win.

Quinn got a half at the short 13th when he negotiated the previously described stymie, the feature shot of the match.

Going to the 14th Donnelly played a beautiful iron after slightly pushing his drive and was home nicely in 2, but Quinn's second was strong running up the mound in back of the green, from where he chipped short and his putt for a 4 hung on the lip of the cup, costing him the hole as Donnelly was down in two putts.

With Donnelly on the 14th in 2, Quinn played a magnificent shot from the rough, the ball splitting the pin, but running about 12 feet beyond.

Donnelly made a great bid for a 3, from the lower terrace, his ball hitting the cup; then Quinn's putt for a birdie stopped about 6 inches short and the hole was halved in 4's.

At the 16th Quinn was trapped with his second but recovered well and got a half.

From the 17th tee Donnelly's drive was in the rough to the left, from where he did not get out any too well but put his third on. Quinn was just short in two back of the trap on the left, from where he chipped strong down the back edge of the green and they halved the hole with 5's, which gave Donnelly a 2 and 1 victory and regained the title which he lost a year ago at the Belmont Spring Country Club.

FRANCE TO HAVE OLYMPIC TEAM

Paris, Aug. 1 (AP)—France may participate in the 1932 Olympic games at Los Angeles after all, officials of the Olympic committee and the ministry of the budget announced today.

The announcement reverses a recent decision of the Olympic committee saying France would not send a representative team to Los Angeles due to lack of funds.

In a communication issued today, the ministry said:

"Thanks to the initiative of Emile Morinaud, under-secretary for physical education and the co-operation of the national sports committee, preparations for the 1932 games will not be interrupted and France's participation may be assured this summer."

Harper of San Francisco confronted Josephine Cruickshank of Santa Ana and Mrs. Marjorie Gladman Van Ryn of Philadelphia, Miss Cruickshank and Mrs. Van Ryn surviving by 8—7, 0—6, 6—4.

Lessons in Wrestling

DOUBLE WRIST LOCK

DYNAMITE GUS SONNENBERG, who you see demonstrating the double wrist lock on JACK ALBRIGHT secured the hold a couple of times in the recent Grapple of the Century and punished DeGlane severely. Gus says the next time he gets on the mat with the world's champion a new champion will leave the mat. Now, scholars, here is just how the double wrist lock is executed. Executed is right.

By GUS SONNENBERG
As Told to GEORGE GRIMM
LESSON No. 13

The double wristlock as pictured above is a comparatively new hold. By that I mean it was only recently developed after an accidental discovery by a young wrestler named Mackey, so I am informed.

It is considered one of the most effective holds in the sport, equally effective for punishment or pinning.

From this position it can be readily seen the immense pressure that can be brought to bear on your opponent's arm, as you are using the full strength and power of both your arms against the opponent's one arm.

There are four different ways you can bring the opponent down, the most popular and effective being too fall backward, bringing your opponent completely over in a somersault and pinning his shoulders by merely bringing pressure on the arm.

Another way is to step with your left leg behind your opponent's right leg and, instead of falling backward, fall forward, forcing your opponent backward, and pinning the shoulders in the same manner as first described.

Still another way is to hold your opponent's arm out straight and, instead of falling backward or forward, roll sidewise, bringing your opponent over your hip and pinning his shoulders.

The fourth way to pin your man is, instead of forcing your opponent's arm downward into a hammerlock position, as illustrated, force his arm upward, getting what is called a reverse double wristlock.

All these ways are effective, depending entirely on the wrestler who applies the hold.

Another Lesson on Monday.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HOTON
"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

For a good drive, swing to these directions: Stand erect, with knees slightly flexed, shoulders arched and weight well back on your heels. Position your hands fairly close to your left leg. Your right shoulder will be slightly lower than your left, merely because your right hand must reach forward some. In the left requiring only the downward reach. Have a firm grip with your left hand and either an equal pressure with the right or a much lighter one—never a heavier pressure with the right. Your left hand should find your thumb back of the top center of the shaft and at least the first two knuckles visible. Now to swing back you are going to push the clubhead back with your left arm and at the same time keep your right elbow close to your hip. Your left arm will sweep across close to your body, as if you meant to reach your left hand across directly toward your right trousers pocket. When your left arm has reached across, to the point where you begin to pull your body, slow up and let your clubhead swing around to the right—without being lifted.

The standing at the end of the first three races is Canada, 17 points; United States, 13. The fourth race will be sailed this afternoon and there is a chance for the Americans to end the series here in a tie.

The final series of four races will be held August 21 and 22 on Lake St. Louis, off Dorval, Canada.

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

The gang was still talking about the thrilling wrestling bout between Gus Sonnenberg and Henri DeGlane when Mr. Boston bobbed into the sporting department.

"Just how did DeGlane score the first and final falls?" queried Billy Connell.

"He intercepted Sonny's flying tackle," replied Mr. Boston. "For months DeGlane has been working on a defense which would lick the tackle. The champion clasps both hands tightly. When Sonny came soaring at him, he dropped down low, ripped his closed hands to Dynamite's face, snapped his head back with terrific force and then reversed Sonny's body. In each case Gus turned half way around and landed on his back with DeGlane on top of him.

Mr. Boston

"The fact Sonny was coming through the air at such a terrific speed caused this smash to knock him out. It is much the same in the boxing game when an aggressive fighter is nailed on the chin with a right hand punch. His own aggressiveness makes the blow much more deadly.

"DeGlane, of course, had the power in his hands, arms and chest to execute this hold perfectly. If he were not so strong, he could not have withstood the shock of the Sonnenberg charge.

DeGlane Stopped Sonny by Fine Defense

"The champion was close to the floor when he ripped his hands up. It was necessary for him to keep down low as Sonny is always most dangerous when near the canvas.

"DeGlane used his defense a little bit different when he licked George. In the George bout, the Frenchman ripped his clasped hands to Ed's ear. He drove George's face into the canvas and then picked him up and tipped him over.

"The way DeGlane hit George was similar to a rabbit punch. At times Henri clipped George on the face, but he didn't try to reverse Ed like he did Sonny.

"The fact DeGlane was originally a Graeco-Roman wrestler helped him a great deal in scoring his victory over Dynamite. He has particularly powerful arms, and is a marvel on the defense.

Gus Showed He Has Improved as Wrestler

"There was enough glory for Sonny as well as for DeGlane. Did you notice how Gus has improved as a wrestler? When the former Dartmouth hero first crashed into the wrestling game, he was just a rough, tough fellow. He has since mastered the fine points of the game. I was amused to see him outwrestle DeGlane on several occasions. Gus was exceptionally good when it came to applying leg holds. He also used arm locks effectively.

"The dramatic ending of the DeGlane-Sonnenberg bout was a big boost for wrestling everywhere. It established the sport in New England.

"In another year, I would not be surprised to see a major wrestling show in Boston draw $100,000. And when that time comes I believe the event will be staged by the Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston Evening American.

"Of course Paul Bowser will give his full co-operation. It would be impossible to put on a major mat event in this city without the assistance of the able Mr. Bowser."

COCHET SAYS HE WILL NOT TURN PRO

Paris, Aug. 1 (INS)—Henri Cochet, ranking amateur tennis player of the world, emphatically denied today that he would turn professional shortly.

Big Bill Tilden, Cochet's old rival, who deserted the amateurs, has already signed up with Jeff Dickson, the young Mississippi sports promoter, for a series of exhibition contests at his new sports palace, which he will open in October.

Dickson attempted vainly to sign up Cochet, so that the two famous rivals in so many amateur matches would again face each other on the courts.

"I hope that Cochet will change his mind," Dickson told International News Service today.

"I intend to keep after him and if he persists in refusing to join the professionals I will try to persuade the French Tennis Federation to allow open matches, as in golf. Thus I could bring together Cochet and Tilden as well as other famous amateur and professional players."

Q. AND A. DEPARTMENT

Dear Sympathetic Aunt Bella—

I have purchased furniture on the installment plan and after meeting half the payments I couldn't meet the balance, and the furniture company took the furniture away. Don't you think I ought to have a rebate?

Ans.—A good way to mend cut oilcloth is to place a strip of adhesive tape underneath the cut and press the oilcloth down on it.

A. (Sympathetic) Bella.

DAILY TRUE STORY

THE TRAP THAT FAILED

JEROME WAS A NOVEL PERSONALITY TO DOROTHY

"Well, goodbye you horrid old beast," she remarked playfully, "I won't have to touch you now for three weeks."

The office gang, gathered near the exit, laughed. The action was typical of Dorothy. It was just such mannerisms that had made her so loved during the year she had been working there that had enabled her to coddle three weeks' vacation out of the "boss".

Bob Brennan laughed with the gang. "I hope you didn't mean me," he wheezed in mock pouting. He accompanied her into the lift.

"I ought to kiss you for being so good," she remarked.

"Come back," he said to her, "feeling good—and alone. Gosh, I'd like to go with you. It's quite a trip for a girl to undertake all by herself. Well, if you ever run short—don't hesitate to call on us. Don't write—telegraph."

"Oh, I'm not afraid—thanks!"

Dorothy had a "swell" time on her journey. She had taken the boat to New Orleans. The spirit of democracy that prevails on big liners and her own engaging personality made acquaintanceship easy. Bridge parties and dancing and—Jerome Vanderman.

Jerome was a novel personality to Dorothy. She who had become accustomed to the workaday world where all she knew toiled daily for a living found a thrill in the attention of a man who had never done a day's work and boasted of it. Besides, he was so handsome and gallant and diverting.

Sometimes the shadow of Bob Brennan came lurking out of strange corners of her mind—but she brushed them aside. After all, he was only the office manager—and although he had wooed her indirectly, she had never really accepted him.

When the boat landed at New Orleans and she prepared to take the train to the coast she was gratified to learn that Jerome Vanderman was on the same itinerary.

"When we hit Los Angeles," he told her enthusiastically, "how would you like to hop a plane for Agua Caliente, across the border? You really shouldn't miss it. It's the kick of a lifetime."

Jerome surmised the reason "Short of funds?" he asked. "I've got plenty. Let me treat."

"Oh, that wouldn't do at all," Dorothy replied proudly.

"Well, then, how about you paying your own way—and in case you run out of funds, letting me lend the balance to you?"

Dorothy couldn't resist the offer. After all, she would repay the loan. Thus they arrived together in California.

The airplane ride to the Mexican town was sheer delight. It was the first time Dorothy had ever been in an airplane. Her heart skipped beats every time the ship shot down or rose abruptly. But she enjoyed it—as well as the sensation of gliding smoothly so high above the earth.

But this thrill paled against the impact of the new scenes in Agua Caliente. She felt as if she was seeing a new world. She watched the bedizened women bent over the baccarat and roulette and indulge in the commoner gambling pastimes, and she felt a touch of envy. She would have liked to put up just a tiny sum herself but realized she did not have enough, so she merely satisfied herself with the vicarious pleasure of watching Jerome lose several thousands.

On the flight back she confided to Jerome that she had run out of funds, and he soothed her.

"Figure out how much you'll need, and I'll give it to you when we reach the hotel."

"Swell," thought Dorothy. "Here's a real man." Involuntarily she had begun to feel a vagrant affection for him. He was such a perfect gentleman. So considerate. So jolly. So good looking. The thought of being spiritually unfaithful to Bob Brennan revolted her mind. But she ignored it. After all she owed no allegiance to him.

A short while after they sat talking in the lobby of the hotel. They were discussing the sights they had seen that day.

"Dotty," he remarked, "how would you like to be in the position of some of these rich women you saw there. Freedom to do anything you pleased. No more getting up early morning and catching trains to work."

A faint cold thrown her soul. She wondered what was he leading up to? Had he fallen in love with her? He had been so chivalrous. She felt her own heart go leaping.

"A girl like you," continued Jerome, "was really made for the life of the rich. You're such a delightful chit—Full of fun and—game. Would you like that kind of life?"

"Why ask me such a silly question?" Dorothy tried to laugh it off nervously.

"Well, you are a game girl," Jerome looked at her through half-closed eyes. Think it over. Would you care to come up to my suite this evening?"

An icy current straightened Dorothy. Jerome's entire plot stood revealed in its nakedness. She rose lifted her hand, and swung her palm resoundingly against his cheek.

Then they stalked out of the lobby.

Back in her room, Dorothy yielded to the floodgates of her eyes. After her crying had quieted her spirit she realized that she was in a real dilemma—no funds left to go home. To borrow any more from Jerome was out of the question of course.

The memory of Bob Brennan and his last words before she set out came back to her. She breathed a sigh of relief. Hastily she rushed to the telegram office. "Stranded here. Please wire $200. Glad to return," she wrote.

She counted the words. There were eight. So she added two more. TO YOU.

The next noon she was on the train back to New York.

FRESH BUYING PUTS CORN UP

An uncertain opening followed the termination yesterday of trading in July contracts, a corner in which had shot prices up to 72½ cents a bushel to finish at the peak. By mid-session today there was a sudden spurt of more than 3 cents a bushel in September futures, which touched 53¾ at 11 a. m., against a close around 50⅛-¼ Friday.

Only 26 cars of corn were received at Chicago today, against 348 a week ago and 98 a year ago.

September corn closed up 3⅝ cents. All grains closed firm.

Lumber Orders Are Above Production

Washington, Aug. 1—Orders received for lumber in week ended July 25 were 7 per cent greater than th cut of the mills, it is indicated in reports from 806 leading hardwood and softwood mills to the National Lumber Manufacturers Association.

Production of these mills amounted to 203,329,000 feet. Their shipments were 16 per cent above this figure. A week earlier 806 mills reported orders 1 per cent above and shipments 3 per cent below a cut of 208,052,000 feet.

Bond Prices' Trend on Week-end Mixed

New York, Aug. 1—Trend of bond prices today was mixed. Outstanding feature was general strength in foreign obligations. German 5½s and 7s both gained major fractions. These were the two msot active loans and their volume showed a decided decrease from recent activity in them. Moderate volume recently has been more or less simultaneous with declining or at least uncertain price movements.

Prices Advanced by Magnolia Pete

Dallas, Tex., Aug. 1—The Magnolia Petroleum Co., following action of other companies recently, has raised Louisiana-Arkansas crude oil prices four to six cents a barrel. It quotes as follows: Bull Bayou, 40 cents a barrel; Haynesville, 32 cents; Pine Island, 36 cents; Cotton Valley, 30 cents; Eldorado, 31 cents; Rainbow, 31 cents; Eldorado east field, 30 cents, and Smackover district, 30 cents.

Pittsburgh Steel Dividend Omitted

New York, Aug. 1 (AP)—Pittsburgh Steel Co. directors have omitted the quarterly dividend of $1.75 on the preferred stock due at this time. The company reported for the year ended June 30 net loss of $1,765,638, compared with net profit of $1,683,149 in the preceding year.

Cotton Lower in New York Market

New York, Aug. 1—Cotton futures today closed easy, 11 to 18 points lower. October, 8.25-27; December, 8.45-48; January, 8.55-57; March, 8.76-79; May, 8.94-96; July, 9.10; spot quiet; middling, 8.15.

Rubber Is Steady

New York, Aug. 1—Rubber futures today were steady; Sept. 5.70; Dec. 5.90; new contracts—Sept. unquoted; Dec. 5.98; March 6.18.

RAYON TRADE IS FAVORABLE

Improvement which has been evident in varying degree in other branches of the textile industry is now apparent in rayon. Production has been held in line with diminishing demand, prices have been stabilized and the industry has been placed in a favorable position to benefit from the increase in demand which is now appearing ahead of season.

In 1930, for the first time since the rayon industry commenced its rapid growth, production and consumption failed to increase over the previous year. Manufacturing facilities in 1930, however, were substantially enlarged, and the point was at hand when producers would have to curtail operations below capacity to prevent serious overproduction. This they have successfully accomplished, at the same time stabilizing prices at a new low level effected in the early days of this year.

Tubize-Chatillon Corp., third largest American producer, has just completed the most authoritative and up-to-date survey of the industry yet made, basing its findings on official figures furnished by manufacturers representing about 95 per cent of the industry. In the past two weeks, the corporation states, sales have picked up substantially, well in advance of the normal seasonal recovery which usually starts about the middle of August. There is a possibility, it believes, that certain popular sizes of rayon will be sold out in the fall, and some customers are placing fall delivery contracts in anticipation of possible shortages.

The industry's productive capacity on July 1, it was found, was 193,800,000 pounds, including 15,000,000 pounds for which machinery has been purchased and delivered, but is not yet in operation. Applying to this a normal idleness figure of 10 per cent to account for machines being repaired, adjusted, etc., effective capacity was 160,000,000 pounds.

NARROW GAINS ARE RECORDED IN WALL ST.

New York, Aug. 1—Short covering gave the stock market a little boost today, but gains for the most part were narrow.

Trading held around minimum levels for the past several years, sales aggregating about 400,000 shares for the two hours.

WEAKNESS IN CASE

Weakness of J. I. Case, which broke 3 points to a new low under renewed selling based on the uncertainty of professional traders as to the dividend maintenance, gave the whole list an easy tone during the first hour.

Recessions, however, were narrow and shorts began to reduce commitments in the second half of the session.

U. S. Steel and Bethlehem each closed half a point higher, but there were advances of 1 to 1½ in such stocks as American Can, American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, Bendix, United Aircraft and Public Service of New Jersey.

Numerous specialties did better, including Columbia Carbon, Bohn and Coca Cola, in which the rise was 2 points.

Nickel Plate preferred dropped 3½ to a new low and Katy preferred sagged 2, also to a new minimum. Atchison, Southern Pacific and Rock Island firmed. Case reduced its loss to slightly more than a point.

News of the Franco-American credit to the bank of England, taking the form of an agreement by the Federal Reserve Banks and the Bank of France to purchase up to $250,000,000 in prime British bills when, as and if the credit is needed, was well received by the financial community.

TRADE NEWS CHEERFUL

Week-end trade reviews were mildly cheerful. Wholesalers and retailers are now looking toward the autumn upturn and at least a few lines, notably textiles, leather and furniture continue to do well. Sentiment is said to be reasonably optimistic.

How much wheat prices would profit by sale of part of the American surplus stocks to Germany, in the event the Reich decides to accept our offer to sell on long term credit was viewed as rather problematical.

The prospect for cotton, in such an event, was seen as somewhat more favorable, since it was believed world consumption might be stimulated.

Steel-making in the Youngstown district next week will be unchanged at 42 per cent, according to the usual weekly forecast. August promises to be a dull month for steel, partly because of the shutdowns at the automobile plants.

Sterling exchange firmed with announcement of the credit arrangement, and cables reached $4.86, up ¼ cent. The French franc was steady.

Curb Market Shows Some Moderate Gains

New York, Aug. 1—The curb market showed a considerably improved tone in the latter half of today's generally dull session, and under the leadership of the utility group, moderately higher price levels were recorded in most sections of the list.

The late advances in the utility list were largely due to week-end covering by shorts, with the latter forced to bid several of the more closely held favorites up rather sharply to meet their requirements.

American Gas & Electric jumped 2 points. North American Light & Power was up 2½, and Electric Bond & Share showed a net gain of a point. Slightly higher levels were also reached by American & Foreign Power warrants. United Gas and United Light & Power.

Oils were irregular, with Solar Refining a strong spot, with a 2-point rise. Vacuum was ⅛ higher, with fractional price losses chalked up in Gulf and Standard of Indiana.

$18,000,000 Merger in Floor Coverings

Formation of a new corporation in the hard-surfaced floor coverings industry to be known as Sloane-Babson Corp., capitalized at $18,000,000, and representing merger of W. & J. Sloane Manufacturing Co., George W. Babson Co., and floor coverings division of Certain-Teed Products Corp., is announced. Productive capacity of new company is one of largest in industry.

Franklin Auto Shipments Up

Syracuse, N. Y., Aug. 1—Shipments of Franklin automobiles in July show an increase of 36 per cent over June. More than two and one-half times as many dealers' orders were received during the month than in June. Last week's business showed over $1,000,000 merchandise sold.

Motorcycle Order Is for Springfield

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 1—The state department of public property and supplies announces award of contract for providing 40 motorcycles for the department of revenue to the Indian Motocycle Co. of Springfield, Mass., for $17,551.

Bush Terminal Nets 92c in 2nd Quarter

Bush Terminal Company reported a net profit of $466,572, equal to 92 cents a share on common stock, for the June quarter. This compares with a net profit of $464,626, or 91 cents in the June quarter of 1930.

Silver Is Unchanged

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

With unfavorable action of the two major steel companies' cuts out of the way, Wall St. today was still engaged in digesting the unsavory dividend dish. Eyes were also turned on a few further dividend reductions to be made. Sidelines were still being recommended by many who have proved competent advisors in the past.

I. T. T. Weakness and Its Dividend

Further weakness in International Telephone & Telegraph will cause revival of doubt concerning the $2 dividend. The stock yields over 7.3 per cent, dividends were not earned in the first quarter this year and estimates currently are that the full year may just barely cover the dividend requirements, or fall short by a few cents per share of meeting the $2 payment.

Scale Covering Order in Westinghouse

One of the most important operators in the market is understood to have placed orders to buy Westinghouse on a scale down from present prices. His orders extend to just below the year's former lowest price. The buying is for the purpose of covering outstanding short commitments.

American Woolen Half-Year Report

More conservative element in Wall St. is awaiting publication of American Woolen's report for the first half of 1931 before interesting itself in the preferred stock.

American Telephone Under Pressure

Persistent weakness of American Telephone is understood to reflect important inside liquidation. This selling is regarded as a sequel to the reduction in the U. S. Steel dividend because both corporations are dominated by the same banking interests, whose conservative attitude in matters of financial policy must now be universally understood.

Telephone Makes Many Savings

American Telephone has been retrenching in several directions. The most important step taken so far has been the reduction in salaries of Western Electric employes, amounting to 10 per cent. While Wall St. believes American Telephone will earn its requirements in 1931, it is not so certain that the $9 rate can be continued indefinitely.

Auto-Lite Cut in Dividend Indicated

Cigarette Price Reductions Feared

Rumor has again been revived that cigarette prices will undergo a downward revision shortly. This is greatly surprising in view of the fact that only a fortnight or so ago all leading manufacturers boosted wholesale prices. Consequently many are inclined to treat the new stories rather lightly.

Big Help to Gillette in Suit Settlement

Estimates that settlement of the legal difficulties between United Cigar and Gillette will add $1,500,000 annually to the latter's income.

Timken Dividend in Grave Danger

Grave doubt is entertained in stock market circles over the safety of the Timken Roller Bearing dividend. Directors meet August 4. Selling based on this apprehension has forced the stock down to this year's lowest point of 29. Despite the fact that the company has been getting some business from Chrysler for the new Plymouth, it is regarded as extremely unlikely that th first half dividend was covered.

Sidelights of State Street Finance

State St. brokers who have consistently advised clients to stay out of the market, in expectation of lower prices, report many customers are now inquiring as to just how long they expect prices to continue to drift downward. One leading wise house points out that bull markets, since the beginning of this century, have invariably come in the fall and they expect the turn from the long bear market of 1929-31 will also follow this unwritten rule.

Using the reports of several large commission houses in order to get a line on the character of trading this week one astute observer contends the short account is being deliberately built up in order to strengthen the technical position of the list. It is his impression the clue to the impending run-in of this group will be a more daring attitude on the part of the sellers on dips.

* * *

Without detracting from the long term outlook for Chrysler one Congress St. broker thinks the pool behind the shares is a bit tired of bucking the trend and is distributing stock around current levels. In his opinion those who desire to accumulate a line can afford to wait a reaction which may carry the price just under $20.

* * *

Flashes from the floor of the New York Stock Exchange received by Boston houses indicate the heaviness of Allied Chemical is due to a combination of selling by investors and shorts. Both, presumably, are founded on the belief the breakup of the nitrate cartel forecasts a price war in which the big holding company has been none too successful.

* * *

Augmenting the opinion that J. I. Case would cut its dividend, expressed here earlier in the week, are rumors that the company will seek new money via a bond issue. The concern holds about $23,639,000 in the form of farmers' notes which are proving to be a frozen asset and with the farm outlook still clouded many think the only way out is to underwrite the account by issuance of a new obligation.

Port of Boston

By JAMES J. DELANEY

With three large freighters with diversified cargoes being unloaded, one of the busiest periods of recent records is under way at Hoosac Docks.

That business in the coastal trade is especially good was shown in the almost simultaneous arrival with large cargoes of the Commercial Quaker from Tampa, Panama City and Mobile direct to Boston, and Commercial Orleanian from New Orleans, Tampa, Philadelphia and Boston and the Bird City from Scandinavian ports.

BORROWS BUCK

One celebrity was given a touch by another celebrity. It happened on the Cosulich liner Vulcania which left Commonwealth Pier for Mediterranean and Asiatic ports. United States Senator J. Hamilton Lewis of Illinois was on the deck and decided that he wanted to send a wire. He found that he had left all his cash in other clothing than those he was wearing. He called on James W. Girard, wartime United States ambassador to Germany, and relieved him of a dollar.

HYDROGRAPHER TODAY

The United States Coast and Geodetic Survey ship Hydrographer is looked for today with new findings as a result of a survey being conducted.

LONG VOYAGE

Ending an 11,000 mile voyage, the Ellerman Line steamer City of Eastbourne arrived here from India, Ceylon, Suez and Port Said and is discharging cargo at East Boston for this port. She has tea, gunnies and hides.

LOSES PROP.

Delay was caused by the loss of one of her propeller blades to the steamer Arizonan, of the American Hawaiian Line, which is in here from California ports. She went into the drydock of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation. A new blade will be installed and she will undergo an examination of her bottom.

LUMBER LADEN

With 2,500,000 feet of lumber on board to be discharged here, the Calmer Line steamer Portmar has been anchored in the harbor since arrival from Pacific coast ports. She will remain there until Monday before going into her berth at the Wiggin Terminal.

LEVIATHAN TODAY

Following one of the most successful week-end cruises ever conducted out of New York, the Leviathan, flagship of the United States Line fleet, resumes her transatlantic sailing today. Bostonians booked to sail are Alan Morse, vice-president and treasurer of the United States Trust Company of Boston; J. Howard Edwards, vice-president of the same institution, and Mrs. Edwards; Mr. and Mrs. Earl S. Kinsley, intimates of President Hoover; Dr. J. F. Williams of Everett is booked to travel with a party consisting of Mary Williams, Joseph F. Carven, Jr., and Rose L. Carven, on their annual trip abroad; General Alfred F. Foote, public safety commissioner of the Commonwealth is traveling with Mrs. Foote, and Edna D. and Olive H. Foote; Dr. Mark Rittner, well known local physician, with Mrs. Rittner and Ruth B. Byrans.

SWEDISH GRANITE

Commodities brought in on the Scantic liner Bird City were granite, wood pulp and general cargo. She is unloading at the Hoosac Tunnel Docks. She came from Skutskar, Norresundby, Vitstavarf, Hernosand and Gydnia. She called at Portland with cargo before coming here.

Give Navy Yard a Chance

We Look to Sec. Adams, New England Man

Marcus A. Coolidge, who soon will take his seat in the United States Senate, said in his Marblehead speech at the Old Ironsides celebration that he does not want to see the Charlestown Navy Yard discriminated against.

Nor do any of us.

But THAT is exactly what we are seeing, and we don't need a ship's binoculars to see it, either.

After Curtis D. Wilbur of California became Secretary of the Navy there began a steady migration to the West Coast of the United States Navy vessels that for generations had been regarded as essential to Atlantic Coast defenses and that had been conditioned and reconstructed by New England navy yard workers who knew their jobs.

The main fleet was centralized at Puget Sound, on Mr. Wilbur's Pacific Coast, and the auxiliary vessels were concentrated at Mare Island, in Mr. Curtis D. Wilbur's backyard.

Portsmouth, N. H., was left only the construction of an occasional submarine, because she is the ablest builder of the under-water craft probably in the world, and Charlestown was required to get along with odd jobs, like the crumbs from the table of the Pacific Coast master.

We now have as Secretary of the Navy a New England man, of distinguished antecedents and a knowledge of our history and our naval equipment.

There is no use fooling ourselves. Ships go for reconstruction and repairs, which mean work and income for local families, to the yards designated by the naval authorities out of their own personal preferences and out of the influence of their political advisers and other latch-pullers.

In view of that fact, we are entitled to turn to Mr. Adams. And we are entitled to expect much from him. Whether we get it or not is up to him.

A Bigger Package

Postmaster Hurley announces an increase in the size of packages that may be carried by parcel post, effective August 1.

The parcel post was the government's answer to a private monopoly that had been created in the express business, with all the possibilities of excessive rates and arbitrary, negligent service which a monopoly ordinarily threatens.

It was just the sort of thing the government should have done, and it is just the sort of thing the government should do in the future when the rights of the public need to be protected from exploitation.

Smug critics said the government couldn't do it successfully. Well, the government has done it successfully.

When the government sets out to do a thing and fails, the government either ought to fold up or it ought to abandon that particularly impossible task. Prohibition is an example.

Just a Little Dog

Beside him was his little dog, guarding him in death with the same devotion and affection as in life.

Man forgets. Friendships come and go. Affluence, pomp and prestige sway him from day to day.

But the dog sticks by, in riches or poverty, in happiness or grief, whether his master be a noble or ragged urchin.

Man, who calls himself a superior being, can never be truly great until he learns this lesson of true loyalty to friendship from the mongrel of the street.

Listen, World!

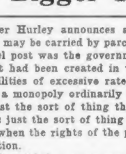
Is Tolerance a Vice?

IS TOLERANCE a vice?

Should we be charitable toward sinners?

Should we try to understand how they got that way and do our best to relieve them from the unpleasant consequences of their folly?



Elsie Robinson

A gentleman who signs himself "For Righteousness" says it is and we shouldn't. Which wouldn't be so remarkable if I didn't get scores of other letters saying the same thing. So maybe there's something to it.

"People need punishment," he starts, "or they never learn sense.

"Tolerance is the sign of a lazy conscience. WE MAKE IT EASY FOR OTHERS BECAUSE WE WANT TO MAKE IT EASY FOR OURSELVES."

(Somebody please page Buddha, Confucius, Epictetus, Jesus of Nazareth, Socrates, and other benevolent philosophers. They had it all wrong about helping that under dog.)

"We should," he snarls, "decide what is right and what is wrong. We should choose definite standards for ourselves. And then we should stick by those standards and demand that others stick by them or pay the penalty. There should be no exceptions, even though the culprit be the one we love best on earth."

(What a cozy little domestic comrade you'd make, stranger.)

"The Puritans may have made a few mistakes, but in the main they were right. There can be no compromise with evil. If a man sins, let him pay the price. Doubtless many will say that I should not condemn because I am not perfect myself. But that has nothing to do with it. If I am unfortunate enough to err, I should hate error all the more and prove it by fighting it in my fellow man."

(Boy! With arguments like that you're wasted on us simple home folk. You and Mussolini, and maybe a few deposed czars and kaisers and sultans, ought to get together.)

"The world is going to the dogs because we no longer have any fixed standards. No matter what a man does, we find some excuse for him. We blame it on his early training, bad environment or the social system. If his act is too abominable, we send for an alienist and have him declared insane. The time has come to call a halt to such tolerance and substitute good, old-fashioned severity."

That's his story. And you can bet he'll stick to it.

Which side do I take? I don't take any. I dasn't! For I have my own reasons for wanting all the tolerance there is. I'm one of those unfortunate humans whose lives are just chuck full of the painful consequences of folly.

Would I like to have those consequences sweet-kissed away? Would I like to hang them on someone's neck?

BRING ON YOUR KISSES AND SHOW ME THE NECK!

Which explains why I vote tolerance and am downright chummy with sinners. But, of course, that may be all wrong. Maybe tolerance IS a blight. Maybe we should lambaste the beam in our brother's eye, regardless of the mote in our own—

And not only heave the first stone but hire a quarry for emergencies—

If so, here's your chance to say so. Don't mind me. I'm not proud.

Who Won the War?

By NELSON HARDING

First-Class Fighting Men

Morals, a Little Loose, Perhaps

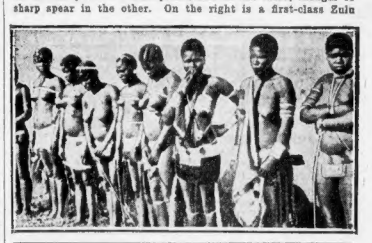
A ZULU PRIEST, ALSO A FIGHTER

A ZULU SAVAGE, IN FIRST-CLASS FIGHTING TRIM

W. J. Makin, British traveler, says that in Africa two sounds give white men an unpleasant thrill. One is the roar of lions, close to your sleeping place; another is the battle song of the Zulu impi or regiment. Here for your attention are presented samples of Zulu men with Zulu young ladies.

The Zulus are the most savage fighters of all the African tribes. They were conquered by the British and their great king, Cetewayo, was banished to an island, taking only fifty wives. There are at present 260,000 Zulus called "a danger to peace and prosperity throughout South Africa."

What they are like as fighters the upper picture shows. On the left you see a Zulu priest, club in one hand, assagai or sharp spear in the other. On the right is a first-class Zulu fighter, "dressed to kill." When he goes into battle he destroys everything and goes stark naked, except for his assagai and heavy shield of rawhide.



YOUNG LADIES OF THE ZULU NATION SELECTED FOR THE DELIGHT AND REPLACEMENT OF THE FIGHTING MEN

Ordinarily savages coming in contact with civilization are rapidly demoralized, killed off by a combination of gin, immorality and blood diseases.

The Zulus refuse to be killed off in this way.

Their priests, who are also witch doctors, talk and sing to them about the ancient glories of the Zulu nation.

Young warriors are bred as carefully as thoroughbred colts are bred for racing.

The young ladies in this picture, remarkably healthy, full of admiration for a good fighting man, cheer, yell and scream when the men march off to war. They spend their time industriously producing new little Zulus that will grow up to be fighters, their mothers teaching them that fighting in wartime and killing lions in peace is the chief occupation for a man.

The task assigned to these Zulu girls is to arrange to keep up the supply of fighting Zulus and to keep the fighting Zulus happy.

Knowing that 500,000,000 human beings now on the earth are as barbarous as these, and as far from our so-called "idea of civilization," you realize that humanity has a long way to go and it is fortunate for us that the earth will last for millions of years more.

You might be interested in reading the account that W. J. Makin gives of the impression that the fighting Zulu warriors make upon white men:

"Once in company with the Prince of Wales I watched a mighty war dance by an assembly of 40,000 Zulus. They advanced, one big impi after another, stripped naked for battle, witch doctors to the fore, Zulu maidens clapping and shrilling their joy, and the vast plain trembling beneath the syncopated stamp of thousands of bare feet.

"When, finally, they assembled for one fierce charge, the spectacle was both magnificent and terrifying. They began with a slow, solemn battle chant. Slowly, like gigantic black crescent moons, they stalked and stamped across the plain. They prolonged the tension before the final charge until it became almost unbearable. Then, at a high pitched scream from one of the dancing witch doctors, the whole black mass with its assagais and shields came pounding forward. The second impi raced behind. And a third. And a fourth. Shock tactics. There was not a white man there who did not leap instinctively to his feet.

"But the charge came to an abrupt close. Within three yards of the Prince of Wales those 40,000 Zulu braves stopped, panting, sweating, roused by song and dance, but held in check by the scream of their own chief."

One of Six Best Cafes

PARIS (By Mail)—We went back to La Tour d'Argent again this evening to dine and happily found it open. To my notion it is one of the six best restaurants in the world—my list including the Ritz Carlton and Colony, New York, the Paris Ritz, Foyot's, and Horcher's in Berlin.

Situated on the Quai de la Tournelle on the left bank, it is the oldest restaurant in Paris, having opened first in 1582 near one of the gates of the city. It has occupied its present site for 100 years. And during its nearly 400 years it has specialized in roast duck.

Duck there is a rite. It is brought to you first only half cooked and before your eyes an expert, with loving care, carves it and completes the cooking over a chafing dish at your table side. He turns it tenderly at intervals and constantly spoons up the gravy to pour over it time and again.

It arrives on your plate a dull gray with gravy almost coal black. The white meat is served with the gravy and souffle potatoes—nothing else. The second course is the upper joint, very dry, and a mixed salad with a dressing touched up with garlic.

The menu warns: "La grande cuisine demande beaucoup de temps," so one must wait for about an hour to be served after giving the order. It was at Tour d'Argent, under the reign of King Charles V, that forks were used for the first time. Madame de Sevigne mentions the restaurant in her letters many times.

The beautiful ladies of Henry III, Cardinal Richelieu and Henry IV here had potage made of almond milk, swans roasted on spits and cranes with plum sauce. George Sand and Alfred de Musset used to meet Alexander Dumas and Henri de Rochefort at la Tour. Napoleon III and the Duc de Mornay dined there often.

It is timbered in dull oak. There is no music and studied quiet reigns. In later years Edward VII, King Leopold of Belgium, Grand Dukes of Russia, Queen Marie, the Shah of Persia, such literary lights as Anatole France and Edmond Rostand and stage stars like Rejane, Bernhardt and Mounet - Sully were regular patrons.

* * *

Only my innate reserve prevented me from skipping over to an adjoining table at La Tour to hug a fellow American. Following dinner he lit a capacious pipe. After a few puffs a waiter politely informed him there were objections. The room was a haze of cigar and cigarette smoke. "I'm funny that way, too," boomed the American. "I object to cigar and cigarette smoke. When they are laid aside I'll put out my pipe." And he puffed on.

Paris is beginning to worry about the disintegation of Eiffel Tower. The first decay in the steel has been detected and experts say that the secondary stage comes quickly and will make it a menace. How to get it down if a far greater problem for engineers than was encompassed in its construction.

* * *

We bumped into Roy Howard's son Jack today. He had just arrived by boat train from the Leviathan and was on his way to the United Press offices, where he will work this summer. Last summer he worked in London and this fall will return to America for his final year at Yale. Perhaps it is a prejudice born of a long friendship with his father, but I know of no American youth whose outlook upon life is so sane and extraordinarily wholesome.

* * *

Alone in wicked rue de Lappe, lined with dark dance halls, this afternoon an Apache type lurched out of a circular bistro and blocking my path demanded brusquely: "A soo, M'soo!" It reminded me of one of those portentously pregnant moments in a French novel, and I thought of a flashing dirk and a crumpled body in a suddenly deserted rue. So I passed him a franc and thrilled: "Keep the change." When scared stiff I either thrill or hiccup.

* * *

A typical French Mama and Papa with what Irvin Cobb calls a strain of Belgian hare debouched from a canopied carry-all in the Bois this afternoon. There were in all eleven children—ranging from two years to about fifteen.

In five minutes Papa was dozing under a tree. Mama was knitting, four children were napping and the rest were playing a game of Rugby football. In an hour we passed them again and all were stretched out on the grass sound asleep. That was a typical French family outing.

In front of Le Berry this evening I fell in conversation with a scientist who said he had been in Indo-China two years and completely out of touch with civilization. I hated to tell him how little he has missed.

Just Folks

Keeping Down

We kept up with the Joneses though the pace was rather swift,
And little joy it brought us or renown.
Now the leaner days have taught us it is wise to practice thrift,
So with the Smiths this year we're keeping down.

When the Joneses bought an auto we stepped out and bought one, too.
When the Joneses went to Europe so did we.
But now our eyes are on the Smiths and everything they do,
So this year we're as careful as can be.

The Joneses kept us busy. It was weary work to roam
And expensive high-falutin' folks to be,
But now we have discovered if the Smiths can sit at home
And be happy and contented, so can we.

It is really quite the fashion, as you travel round about:
No one ever seems to notice hat or gown.
It was keeping up with Joneses that completely wore us out.
With the Smiths it's so much easier keeping down.
